LAB Raising Prices On Imported Wines

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government has increased the price of 40 imported wines effective July 1, in a reversal of an earlier announcement that prices would come down to encourage moderation.

All heavy-selling low priced imported wines have had their prices increased.

They are the main competitors for B.C. wines, which have had their prices frozen.

On March 31, provincial Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair announced the government would reduce the prices of imported and domestic wines to encourage British Columbians to switch from hard liquor.

This would encourage moderation in drinking, he said.

In April, in line with this policy, the price of a French wine, Chateaneuf Du Pape, was reduced from $5.35 to $5.10. Effective this week, the price has been increased $1.65 to $6.75.

Several other mid-price and expensive wines, were also increased, especially those from France and Germany.

Biggest blow, however, was a decision to increase the top-selling low priced imported wines.

Yago was increased to $2.20 from $2, Gamza was increased to $2.20 to $2.10, Pinot went up to $2.50 from $2.35 and Mouton Cadet went to $3.95 from $3.75.

In the mid-price range, Marquisat, a big-seller, went from $5.45 to $5.55.

Nick Clark, spokesman for the pricing department of the liquor administration branch, said the increases were ordered due to higher costs.

Some French and German wine producers have increased their prices but an even bigger factor is the slump in the Canadian dollar compared to the European currencies, Clark said.

On the basis of cost increases, further price increases can be expected in imported wines.

On the domestic front, prices were stable or down slightly. Wine prices were unchanged but Canadian rye prices were reduced in British Columbia, despite the government policy of discouraging consumers away from hard liquor.

A total of 21 Canadian rye brands showed decreases of a nickel or dime.

Clark said the government is passing along price changes announced by producers. Some brands had increased prices this spring but the majority did not. Now, for competitive reasons, distilleries are rescinding their earlier price increases and the price cut is being passed along to consumers.

He said wine drinkers could expect to pay significantly higher prices for imported wines later this year because of European market conditions. A frost killed many acres of grapes in France this spring and the wine crop will be lower than usual.

Germany had a good grape crop but appears to be producing a smaller volume of table wines this year.

These two factors, along with currency fluctuations, would mean further price increases, if the government decided to pass them along to consumers.

In March, Mair said he expected the government would have between $5 million and $6 million less per year in revenues because of the price cuts announced at that time.

He was not available this morning to comment on what the revenue totals would be in light of the price increase effective this week.

MARKET BLAST

PETAH TIVQA (Reuter) Twenty-three people were injured when a bomb exploded beneath a vegetable stall in a crowded market today.

Security authoritites said the blast was caused by a "fairly large" bomb being planted in a vegetable crate.

It was the worst bombing since May, 1976, when an explosion in Jerusalem killed one person and wounded 29.

Gov't Will Probe RCMP Break-Ins

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will establish a royal commission to look into the "extent and prevalence" of illegal activities by the RCMP, Solicitor-General Francis Fox announced today.

Fox told the Commons that the three-member commission's specific task "will be to ascertain the extent and prevalence of investigative practices and other activities not authorized or provided for by law, involving members of the RCMP . . ."

The commission would also "examine the policies and procedures that govern the activities of the RCMP in the discharge of its responsibility to protect the security of the country."

It was essential, Fox said, that a full investigation be made into allegations in recent weeks of unlawful actions by the RCMP.

The announcement followed weeks of pressure by the Commons opposition as a result of a series of incidents involving the RCMP. In one, an RCMP chief superintendent in Montreal pleaded guilty to authorizing a 1972 raid without warrant. There were indications in a statement by Fox that politicians at the time were either misinformed or not told of police involvement in the break-in.

The RCMP are also a subject of a royal commission in Alberta, where Attorney-General Jim Fister has said the handling of an investigation had forced him to withdraw charges because prosecution would have been impossible.

In Ontario, police are investigating the RCMP's role in a 1970 theft of documents from a lef-wing group.

A judicial inquiry in New Brunswick is preparing a report on, among other things, the way the RCMP in that province handled allegations of kick-backs to government on contracts.

SCHOOL'S OUT and the sun's shining — a combination that's sure to bring boys down to their favorite fishin' spot. These youngsters are trying their luck off the causeway floats, and while they may not land the big one here, those little herring just might be the bait for a king-size salmon later.

B.C. TEL STRIKE VOTE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Telecommunications Workers Union said Tuesday it will hold a strike vote among its 10,000 members at the B.C. Telephone Co.

Union spokesman Bob Donelly made the announcement after contract negotiations broke down earlier in the day. He said the union is seeking the strike mandate because B.C. Tel has been trying to make substantial changes in the recommendations of conciliation commissioner Dr. Noel Hall, which the union accepted.

Those recommendations called for a one-year contract.

"This short-sighted attitude of the company will probably result in a total disruption of communications in this province," he told a news conference.

Donelly said he is "absolutely certain" TWU members will vote overwhelmingly to strike.

Hall's report recommended a 45-cent hourly increase in a one-year agreement retroactive to Jan. 1 on wage rates ranging from $6.42 to $9.15 an hour. Hall said the wage recommendations fall within federal Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

INSULATION SPY TO FILM HOMES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal government jets have been ordered to fly over Vancouver-area homes in an aerial photo-spying mission in the name of energy conservation.

The project has been launched by British Columbia Hydro in conjunction with the federal energy department as a means to cut heating bills for homeowners.

Three energy department jets are equipped with special sensory equipment to take aerial infrared photographs to help homeowners pinpoint where heat is escaping from roofs and windows.

The photographs (thermograms) will be taken at night to record heat images, and will depict well-insulated roof in black, while skimpy insulation will appear grey or, at worst, white.

Hydro spokesman Syd Orpwood said Tuesday a reduction in the heat loss could be achieved through follow-up insulation by the homeowner. An identical program in Lindsay, Ont., was followed up with residents viewing the photographs in a community sports arena. They were helped in "reading" the photographs by technical assistants.

Orpwood said if the Vancouver project is successful, Hydro will likely launch aerial scans in Kamloops and Victoria.

The Vancouver program is planned for January or February, 1978.

English Told To Open Minds

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau began the long-awaited debate on national unity Tuesday with a professorial plea that language rights are the key to an undivided Canada, but the opposition retorted that bilingualism will not save the country.

Trudeau, announcing a special unity task force to be headed by former Anti-Inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin and former Ontario premier John Robarts, called on English Canadians "to open their hearts, to open their minds" to French Canada.

"If the francophones are to remain part of this country . . . then this will require certain accommodations by the English-speaking majority," he said. "Accommodations like sharing more power with French-Canadians in business, professions and private organizations; like greater willingness . . . to provide for French-speaking minorities."

Otherwise, he warned, his voice at all times quiet and conciliatory, Canada would become "two language ghettos existing side-by-side."

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark and his New Democrat counterpart, Ed Broadbent, both accused Trudeau of having tunnel vision.

Clark, referring to the prime minister's remarks that he had been spreading the unity gospel across the country since the Parti Quebecois took over that province eight months ago, said Trudeau should have delivered his opening sermon in Parliament.

"This should've been the first place he came to discuss national unity," the Tory leader said, reiterating his contention that Trudeau is trying to emasculate Parliament by ignoring it.

He said both Trudeau and his government had been preoccupied "too exclusively"

CHAMPAGNE ROUND-UP IN LAGOS

LAGOS (AFP) — Police seized more than 4,000 bottles of champagne today in what the national radio described as a bid to check ostentious living in the city.

In February the Nigerian military government proclaimed a decree banning champagne and other sparkling wines, stipulating a fine of $1,600 or six months jail for defaulters.

The government said it banned champagne because, besides constituting a drain on the nation's foreign exchange, it had become a status symbol among the wealthy.

Phillipponi Gift Probe Under Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deputy police chief Tom Dixon said Tuesday that a combined investigation by the attorney-general's department and the RCMP into bribery charges stemming from a Christmas list belonging to Penthouse Cabaret owner Joe Phillipponi should be complete in two to three weeks.

Dixon said the investigation was a result of evidence produced at Phillipponi's bribery trial in May.

Phillipponi was convicted of giving a bribe to a member of the B.C. Liquor Board and was later sentenced to 30 months in jail.

County court Judge John Spencer convicted Phillipponi of unlawfully and corruptly offering and giving valuable consideration to Pia Tofini in an attempt to influence her decision in the board hearing over cancellation of the liquor licence for the Penthouse Cabaret.

Dixon said a number of people were under investigation, but declined to mention names or positions of the people involved.

On Tuesday, attorney-general Garde Gardom denied any knowledge of the investigation by his department.

CBC radio claimed a number of prominent British Columbians, including a judge, four Vancouver city aldermen and two Vancouver newsmen received gifts.

The CBC said it had a list of people given gifts by operators of the Penthouse Cabaret.

SALMON FISHERMEN NETTING A BONANZA

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a million-dollar opening day for commercial fishermen netting the heavy Stuart Lake sockeye salmon run, expected to be the largest since records were kept.

Fishermen aboard boats scattered along the nearby Fraser River and in Georgia Strait worked until they were exhausted Monday, some up to their knees in silvery salmon.

About 200,000 fish were landed on 70 gillnet boats. The fish are worth about $5 each to the fishermen and more than double that to the retailer.

Some fishermen caught up to 800 fish Monday, worth about $4,000.

"My wrists are so sore from taking fish off the net that I can hardly move my hands today," said one fisherman interviewed Tuesday. "My God, I took in 370 fish on my first set of the season."

John Roos of the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission said one reason for the large run, which peaks every four years, is that there was an industry shutdown in 1969 and many fish escaped up the Fraser to spawn.

He said fishways through the Fraser Canyon have also been improved so that more spawners survive the battle upstream and more young salmon swim to the sea.

Ross said a run of about 1.5 million sockeye had been predicted, but that number may be too conservative.

Fishing was slack on Tuesday during a tour of the fishing area with federal fisheries officers. But there were no grumbles from fishermen with the possibility of another bonanza catch next Monday when sockeye fishing will be allowed again.

Airline Denies Racism

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Air Canada has categorically denied that racial discrimination was involved when a group of Metis and non-status Indians were ejected from an overbooked Air Canada flight at Ottawa International Airport on Sunday, June 26.

In a statement issued in Montreal Tuesday, Pierre Jeanniot, eastern region vice-president, clamed the bumping of the native people resulted from a "procedural error" on the part of a clerk in the airline's Montreal reservations office.

The clerk cancelled the group's confirmed reservations because the employee thought it was a duplicate booking, Jeanniot said.

The reservations employee was said to be confused because two groups of native people had reservations on the flight.

One group was headed for Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, the other was going to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories.

It was the Yukon group that had its reservations cancelled in error, the Jeanniot statement claimed.

The explanation has done nothing to satisfy the Native Council of Canada that racism was not involved in the way Air Canada ground personnel treated the native people.

The Council represents Canada's 750,000 Metis and non-status Indians and an official said Tuesday the organization would vigorously pursue its court action to recover dam-

Railwest Subsidy Promised

The provincial government has stepped in with an 11th-hour promise of a subsidy to keep the Railwest boxcar manufacturing plant in Squamish open for a while.

But the plant will have to close Aug. 14 for two months anyway to allow time for materials to be ordered, and reopening is contingent on an order for boxcars still being pursued.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, who went to Ottawa last week to try to get a federal boxcar contract to keep the plant open, told the legislature Tuesday the government is willing to subsidize the cars produced at Railwest so their prices will be competitive with the other plants.

Phillips said there is an order coming shortly from Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian National Railway for between 200 to 600 ballast cars.

The provincial government, he said, will guarantee that Railwest's bid on that order is as low as the lowest bid from any other company.

Phillips estimated that if the government-owned boxcar plant receives an order for 300 cars, it could remain open, with about 160 employees, until mid-February.

There are about 250 employees at the plant.

NDP economic development critic Gary Lauk estimated that Railwest could produce the cars for between $19,000 and $22,000 a car, while other Canadian plants would likely do it for $18,500 so the subsidy could be up to about $3,500 a car.

Lauk said he was disturbed Phillips has waited so long to act and likened the minister's trip as "arriving in Quixotic fashion on a swayback horse, plopping into Ottawa."

"Once again you've been led down the garden path (by the federal government)," Lauk said.

He said the government had laughed for months at the opposition's suggestion of a subsidy, but when it was finally obvious the plant would close without it, Phillips had to "get off his fat stats" and go back to Ottawa with the offer.

'Actual Killing' Film Circulating West Van

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police here have confiscated "kiddie-porn" films, there's a "snuff" film — a woman actually killed on screen during a sex performance — circulating somewhere on the upper levels of West Vancouver, and there's talk of anti-porn vigilante squads in the central interior.

"Pornography is becoming a serious problem in Vancouver," says Insp. Ken Brown, Vancouver vice squad. "With profits anywhere from 300 to 600 per cent to be made, it's right up there with drugs, prostitution, and gambling. The fear of the vice squad is that the situation is ripe for takeover by organized crime."

Corp. Darrell Wakelam of the RCMP morality squad, says local porn producers already are reliant on American mob connections to process and distribute their films.

"The cost to produce porn films using children here is pretty high," he said. "The thing is, to get the film processed and duplicated . . . well, there's no such place up here. We don't have the facilities so they go down to L.A." where the prints are made and shipped through a network of distributors.

Once considered the product of South America and Mexico, kiddy porn-films displaying the sex acts of children, often as young as four and five years old — now, are produced in the U.S. and Canada.

"We got one with a South American brother and sister which were among the first to make it up to Canada," Wakelam said. "There's a few copies around. They're trickling in over the border. We hear there are some done locally but we haven't nabbed them yet."

Sources indicate the appearance locally of a South American "snuff" film, apparently making limited rounds of several fashionable residences in West Vancouver. Although a number of films have appeared in which death is simulated, the West Vancouver film allegedly shows a South American or Mexican woman being shot and stabbed on screen.

"That's the ultimate film," Wakelam said. "That's as far as you can go."

"When people get tired of ordinary, straight sex, that's when you see the kinky stuff. Bestiality, sadism, bondage, kids, and death, as far as you go.

"We can't do anything about it because we're up against legislation and public apathy," Wakelam said. "The definition of obscene matter is anything that is totally concerned with sex, depending on territorial morals."

But Brown says any raid on a porn store is treated lightly by police and media alike.

Neutron Threat to SALT

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. arms control and disarmament agency has warned the White House that production of the new neutron eight-inch artillery projectiles and Lance missile warheads might damage one or more major United States arms negotiations initiatives with the Soviet Union and other nations.

"No one here thinks it is a good idea to build these weapons now," said one ACDA official Tuesday. "But there is a division of opinion within the agency as to how much effect production will have on these negotiations."

According to informed executive branch and congressional sources, the still-secret ACDA analysis of producing a new generation of enhanced radiation tactical nuclear weapons pointed out possible adverse impact on:

—Talks with the Soviet Union on a comprehensive test ban treaty since according to an ACDA source, additional underground nuclear tests are needed before either the Lance neutron warhead or the neutron eight-inch shell are ready for production.

—Pursuing non-proliferation talks with nations, that currently do not have nuclear weapons because the United States would be moving toward a second generation of weapons while telling others they should not have a first.

—Discussions with NATO allies and the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact nations to cut down on both sides, European forces where, three years ago, American spokesmen pledged not to move to "mini-nukes" that would reduce the threshold between nuclear and conventional weapons.

The neutron weapons are not considered "mini-nukes" because their yields are still large enough to distinguish them from conventional weapons.

Nonetheless, the accuracy and limiting of collateral blast and heat damage of the enhanced radiation weapons make them appear more usable than the current tactical nuclear weapons now deployed in Europe, according to Pentagon planners.

Opponents of the neutron weapons argue this very quality, which makes them credible as deterrents also means, by logic, that they lower the nuclear threshold that now exists.

Meanwhile, France, West Germany and three other European nations have signed an agreement in Paris to develop and export fast-breeder nuclear reactors in open defiance of U.S. President Jimmy Carter's effort to ban such atomic devices.

The five-nation accord Tuesday was hailed by French government officials as a reaffirmation of West Europe's energy independence from Washington.

The fast-breeder reactors are fueled by plutonium, the material used in nuclear warheads.

School Vandalism Researched

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. School Trustees Association has commissioned a $20,000 study on vandalism in schools, Ken Werker, BCSTA co-ordinator of research services, said Tuesday.

Werker said the study will look for human solutions rather than technical solutions, such as guards and burglar alarms, in an attempt to cut down the $7 million in vandalism against schools in 1975-76.

"We hope to develop an education program for students, teachers and communities across B.C. to help cut down on vandalism, and the content of the program will be determined by the study," he said.

BITING BATS MAY BE RABID

Bats that go bite in the night can be dangerous at this time of year, warns the provincial ministry of health.

Dr. Anthony Larsen, director of epidemology for the ministry's public health programs, said today it is bat time in B.C. and warned that bats with rabies are dangerous.

Already this year one man has been bitten by a bat that turned out to have ravies.

Anyone bitten by a bat should trap the bat, killing it if necessary and then report to a doctor or a public health unit taking the bat along.

"I would advise anyone to avoid handling a bat that appears to be sick or that seems to be unusually tame. It could have rabies," Larsen said.

At this time of year it's especially important not to let bat bites go untreated, Larsen said. "People should be especially wary of any bat that is acting strangely."

The treatment for rabid bat bites is a daily series of uncomfortable injections for two weeks, Larsen said.

PEACE FORCE REJECTED

SALISBURY (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith today rejected the prospect of a Commonwealth peacekeeping force to keep order in Rhodesia during a transition to black majority rule.

Smith was asked at a news conference if he would allow a force consisting of troops from British Commonwealth countries such as Nigeria, Ghana, India and Canada, to come to Rhodesia during the transition period.

"The sort of thing we've been reading about in the newspapers is a nonstarter," he said.

Britain has said it and the Unite States were exploring the possibility of such a peacekeeping force.

"On the other hand," Smith said, "if there is a constructive suggestion on the part of responsible members of the free world — those who are helping us to try to come to a settlement — to make a contribution, it would be ridiculous for Rhodesia to turn this down."

'Open Hearts, Minds,' Trudeau Tells English

with the Official Languages Act, to the point where such pressing issues as the economy, regional disparity and western alienation virtually had been ignored.

"This sign of some action by the prime minister is too late."

Clark, whose barbs must have been hitting home in Liberal ranks if the amount of heckling that resulted is any indicator, also commented on the special Pepin-Robarts task force, wishing it well.

But he introduced a motion calling for establishment of a joint Senate-Commons committee to handle the inquiry instead of the task force, which he dismissed as yet another piece of evidence of the Liberals' contempt for Parliament.

The Conservative leader made it clear that he is not against institutionalized bilingualism, but he quarrelled sharply with Trudeau's contention that language policy will unify Canadians.

"In that respect, the prime minister could not be more wrong!"

He recalled Canada's centennial celebrations of 1967, remarking on the spontaneous enthusiasm prevalent then, an atmosphere he said contrasts sharply with "the forced gaiety" that marked the approach to the country's 110th birthday.

Braodbent, if anything, was even more scathing than Clark in his criticism of the government, especially about the Pepin-Robarts group, which is to include five other regional representatives.

Four names were announced Tuesday: Richard Cashin, a former Newfoundland MP; John Robert Evans of Ancaster, Ont.; Muriel Kovitz of Calgary and Ross Murks, the mayor of 100 Mile House, B.C. The name of the fifth regional representative, from Quebec, is to be announced after the government finds one.

The NDP leader, an economist, criticized the work done by other "task forces," such as the royal commission on taxation and the one on foreign ownership.

He said the tax system has become even more unfair and inequitable since the group's report was submitted to the government and that despite foreign ownership recommendations, "Canadian industry is being gobbled up at an ever-increasing rate."

Broadbent said that based on this record, "we can expect greater disunity in the future rather than a united Canada."

ages arising out of the incident.

The Council has claimed since the incident first caught media attention that 15 native people were ejected from the over-booked aircraft and that at least two were told to get off because they looked like Indians.

The two were from the Northwest Territories and held individual confirmed reservations. They were not members of the Yukon group, whose reservation status was questioned by Air Canada, a native council official repeated Tuesday.

The Air Canada statement mentions 13 as the number of native poeple bumped from the Winnipeg-bound flight.

The statement claims that "those deplaned were given refunds of half their fare, plus free ground transporation, lodging and meals while waiting to be put aboard the next available flight . . ."

Bipp Webber, president of the Yukon Association of Non-Status Indians, said from Whitehorse Tuesday that the Yukon delegates, however, refused the $60 refunds because it was felt they amounted to "tokenism."

Webber said: "We are not pleased with the treatment Air Canada gave us. They (AC staff) made our delegates feel like they were getting a handout rather than trying to correct the mishap."

General Plans Vote

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Pakistan's new military ruler, Gen. Muhammed Ziaul Haq, says he has no personal political ambitions and plans to hold an election in October.

There was no indication when the army chief-of-staff plans to release former prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who has dominated Pakistani politics for years, and the rest of the country's leading politicians arrested during the bloodless military coup Tuesday.

"I want to make it clear that I have not assumed responsibility because of any political ambitions," Ziaul said in a broadcast Tuesday night. "The step has not been taken at the prompting of any interested person."

Traffic Mishap Injures Seaman

Miz Lillian and Her Carters Not Funny, Says Punch Reader

LONDON (AP) — Punch weekly, which has been making Britons laugh since 1841, found itself in a predicament Tuesday concerning U.S. President Jimmy Carter's mother.

The magazine was taken before a watchdog committee to answer an accusation of unethical conduct for running a series of spoof letters purportedly written by Miz Lillian.

The letters — the work of deputy editor Alan Coren — chronicle the doings of the Carter family and a related gallery of fantastic characters, such as are popularly believed by English writers to live in the American South. Among them are Uncle Stinkweed Carter, Cousin Nehemia Hopest Carter, Auntie Gutpump Carter, Great Auntie Fulalia Moonshine Carter, Uncle Snob Carter III, Private Chickenhaid Carter and many more.

The letters so upset reader Alison Oliver, 71, of Edinburgh that she complained to the Press Council that Punch had gone too far. Miss Oliver said the letters were unethical because they were not written by the person under whose name they appear, as well as being distasteful, scurrilous, vicious, unfair attacks on an elderly lady and "calculated to hurt, annoy and antagonize the president of the United States and every American."

Coren, who wrote an earlier series of spoof bulletins of Ugandan President Idi Amin, said he has had fan letters from American readers for the Miz Lillian series, and he would defend his work at the meeting of the Press Council complaints committee. Meetings of the council are closed to the public and nothing is revealed until a decision is announced.

The council, which has no compulsive power, was set up in 1953 to maintain press freedom and professional standards. It is known for its occasional adjudications on complaints from the public about newspaper stories.

Meanwhile, publishers Robson Books announced they will issue a paperback edition of Coren's Miz Lillian letters in October under the title The Peanut Papers.

The wrapper of the projected book carries photographs of the Carter family and drawings of stereotypes.

Alta. Nurse Strike To Hit 30 Hospitals

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta nurses served strike notice today on 20 more hospitals, raising the total number of institutions affected by the first nurses' walkout in the province to 30 by next Monday.

More than 3,500 nurses—almost 30 per cent of the province's total—might be off work next week as the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses (AARN) steps up its campaign for a new contract.

About 2,600 nurses at seven urban hospitals have been off the job since Monday, the same day AARN members at Brooks General, Jasper's Seton General and Lethbridge General served notice for next Monday.

Nurses now on strike include those at Edmonton's Royal Alexandra and General hospitals, Calgary's General and Holy Cross hospitals, Grande Prairie General, Lethbridge St. Michael's General and the Red Deer General.

Hospitals Minister Gordon Miniely says that even with 20 more institutions, mostly in smaller communities, hit by strikes next week, the government is not prepared to step into the dispute.

"There are no specific areas of concern at this point," he said in an interview Tuesday.

The government has the authority to order the nurses and the Alberta Hospital Association (AHA), which bargains on behalf of hospital boards, to compulsory arbitration.

The AARN seeks an 18-per-cent wage increase but the AHA has offered six per cent.

Federal anti-inflation board guidelines allow nurses a six-per-cent increase but union nurses should receive more because of historical relationships with British Columbia and Saskatchewan nurses.

The nurses now have a starting salary of $972 a month, compared with $1,184 in British Columbia.

All but one of the seven hospitals hit so far said they encountered few problems during the second day of the strike Tuesday.

Red Deer General Hospital was reported in a "crisis situation" when nurses cut off emergency-ward care Tuesday morning.

Executive director Gordon Kerr said attempts were being made to reduce the patient load to 25 from 50, with the 223-bed institution remaining open only for "dire, dire emergencies."

PRINCE ANDREW ESCAPES PRISON

For a moment Tuesday it looked as though Prince Andrew was going to jail.

But it was all a case of mistaken identity out there in the wilds west of Victoria.

Jim McPhee is the advance man, the person who travels ahead of the holidaying prince to make sure all's in readiness at his next stop.

Tuesday there was a visit to Pearson College scheduled so McPhee dutifully headed out there in front, stopped at some official-looking gates, introduced himself to some startled staff.

The people at William Head prison recovered in time to point the way to the college down the road.

Bullets Found In Prince's Hotel

CALGARY (CP) — A box of live ammunition found in the lobby of the hotel that Prince Charles was about to check into caused a security flap Tuesday.

A guest at the downtown Four Seasons Hotel found a brown paper package in a telephone booth in the hotel lobby and handed it in, said Michel Gauvin, federal co-ordinator for the royal visit.

The package was found to contain a full box of .44-calibre magnum shells and a message was radioed to Prince Charles' party, driving in from the Calgary international airport.

The Prince of Wales is in southern Alberta on a five-day visit to take part in activities to commemorate the signing of Treaty 7 with the Blackfoot confederacy in 1877.

RCMP officers surrounded Prince Charles as he got out Treaty Seven. of his car and tried to whisk him away quickly to his suite on the 20th floor.

However, Charles proved charming and raised eyebrows when he stopped to talk to two elderly ladies waiting to take his photograph.

Today Prince Charles will sit on a buffalo robe sharing a peace pipe with Indian leaders to mark the centennial of the treaty that opened southern Alberta to white settlers.

He will join 4,000 Plains Indians—the largest such gathering in modern Alberta — on the final day of week-long activities commemorating

Boy Burned, Girl Leaps To Rescue

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Wilma McEwan, 14, of Prince George has been credited with saving the life of a seven-year-old boy burned by a 7,200-volt power line here Monday.

Randal Dorion, also of Prince George, was knocked 10 feet to the ground by an explosion after touching the 7,200-volt power line inside a B.C. Hydro substation.

McEwan jumped over the eight-foot high fence, ripped off his burning clothing, covered Dorion with her jacket and urged nearby children to call police.

"Wilma's actions saved the boy's life," said RCMP Constable John Holyk. "Had his jacket caught fire, he probably would have died."

Dorion was sent to hospital where he remained in critical condition Tuesday, with burns to about 60 per cent of his body.

Alaska Ferries Going on Strike

JUNEAU (AP) — State and union officials Tuesday approved a plan for shutting down the Alaska Ferry system with a strike by members of the Inland Boatmen's Union.

Tentative plan called for the state's eight ferries to begin docking Wednesday with the shutdown completed Saturday. Each ferry will dock at its final destination before IBU members walk off the job.

William Hudson, director of marine transportation, said a schedule of the phased shutdown would be published as soon as possible so passengers will know what the state can and cannot do.

The strike by the IBU's 500 members will cut off all public surface transportation to about two dozen southeast Alaska communities as well as Kodiak Island.

In addition, state officials said the strike will have a major inpact on Alaska's summr tourist season if it lasts for any extended period of time.

Bill Allen, state administration commissioner, said the state won't seek a court order to force the union back to work.

LOOK AGAIN, UGANDA TOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ugandan high commissioner has been called into the external affairs department for the third time to hear Canadian concerns about the fate of Toronto Star reporter Gerald Utting believed in the African country, possibly under arrest.

An external affairs spokesmen added that: "We are 99-per-cent sure Utting is in there somewhere."

Pacemaker to Control Brain

OTTAWA (CP) — A surgical team here is scheduled to plant a pacemaker in the brain of a 13-year-old cerebral palsy victim today. Doctors hope the device will help free the boy from the prison of his body.

A spokesman for the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario said it will be known within a week if the operation has been a success for Jean Binda.

Only a few operations of the type have been done in Canada.

Cerebral palsy usually is caused by a lack of oxygen during birth. This destroys some brain cells, leading to poor muscle co-ordination and involuntary muscle spasms.

Jean, born with an umbilical cord choking him, is like many other cerebral palsy victims — mentally normal and able to understand everything. But because of the inability to co-ordinate his muscles he cannot walk or use his hands and has a difficult time producing sounds or words.

"Cerebarl palsy victims are in fact imprisoned in their own bodies," the hospital said in a news release.

Doctors hope the 16 electrodes they plan to fix to the tough fibrous membrane enclosing the cerebellum — the large segment at the base of the brain responsible for muscle control and body equilibrium — will provide electrical stimulation to inhibit involuntary movements.

Wires will be led from the electrodes under the skin of the neck to the chest, where a small receiver is to be implanted. Other equipment consists of a nexternal antenna and transmitter.

Dr. Leslie P. Ivan, head of the 20-person team which will do the operation, stressed that it is not a cure for cerebral palsy but the improved brain control over muscles it makes possible should help improve breathing, skill of the hands, and speech as well as reduce involuntary movements.

The operation will be the first of its kind in Ottawa. Two more are scheduled for August. Five such operations have been done at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

The Least Bad Option

The National Energy Board gave most Canadians a pleasant surprise this week when it came out in favor of the Alaska-Canada pipeline route rather than the Arctic Gas route down the Mackenzie Valley. For years the NEB has had a reputation of being very much a bureaucratic, administrative body, much more concerned with the financial and technical aspects of energy policy than with the social or environmental aspects.

Therefore, it was doubly delightful to read an NEB report placing considerable emphasis on the fate of caribou, Beluga whales, and snow geese in the north and an equal emphasis on the rights and problems of the native people living along the pipeline corridors.

The earlier report of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger told Canadians of the immense problems a Mackenzie Valley pipeline corridor would bring. But Berger, although highly respected by politicians of all stripes, is well known as a champion of native rights and environmental causes, and it was to be expected that he would emphasize these problems.

It is a measure of the cynicism of most Canadians that they thought the Berger report would be put quietly away on a shelf somewhere to gather dust and Arctic Gas would go ahead with its pipeline. After all, they thought, Arctic Gas is a consortium of some of the largest multinational corporations in the world. What power do natives and caribou and whales have beside that?

But now it is becoming increasingly clear that perhaps Arctic Gas's proposal will be scuttled and the Alcan route will get the nod instead. It too will have environmental and social problems attached; no project of that size can be without them. But a pipeline along an established highway is clearly going to spawn fewer such difficulties than one through an ecologically sensitive wilderness.

Arctic Gas continues to maintain that the Alcan route will not deal with Canada's future energy problems as well as one down the Mackenzie Valley would. However, the NEB has done its best to alleviate these concerns by saying the Alcan route should be tied into a Dempster highway link that could, when necessary, tap the natural gas fields of the Mackenzie delta.

Aside from the environmental and social problems the Alcan route can avoid, it appears now it will also prove to be the best political choice. The U.S. government apparently is much more likely to accept that route as a vehicle for Alaska gas to reach the continental U.S. than it would be to tie in with Arctic Gas. Indeed it has been suggested that if Canada proceeded with the Mackenzie Valley option, the U.S. might also go ahead with its option of shipping liquefied natural gas from Alaska down the B.C. coast in tankers — surely a potential environmental disaster for B.C.

There are no good options when it comes to the problem of bringing scarce energy resources out of the north. There are only bad options and worse options. It seems the NEB has done a good job in picking the least bad option. The federal government must now withstand the pressure that undoubtedly will come from Arctic Gas and back up its own board.

Salt Spring Island

There is enough prima facie evidence of incompetence and sloppy administration of affairs on Salt Spring Island for Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis to order the inspector of municipalities to investigate or to establish a special inquiry by an independent commissioner.

Things have been allowed to slide along for nearly a decade. Salt Springs' informal old boy system of administration was suited to an era when one family dominated the island, but the population explosion of the 1970s finds it sadly inadequate.

Times reporter Mike Hughes' two-part story last week on Salt Spring established that fact. It also established clearly that different groups on the island have gotten different treatment, that some landowners have had to meet the letter of the law exactly in construction and zoning matters while others have been able to get around the same requirements. This situation cannot be allowed to continue.

Part of the problem is Salt Spring's isolation from the traditional style of government for communities of its size — municipal status. Imposing the regional district system on the island in the 1960s, then superimposing the islands trust on that three years ago only made matters worse. The island today elects one regional district director and two island trustees — far too few directly elected spokesmen for its population.

There are villages in B.C. smaller than Ganges with elected councils that run their affairs. They may run them well or badly but they are elected every year and are subject to an annual settling of accounts.

On Salt Spring this vacuum has been filled mostly by appointed officials who are responsible to authorities 30 miles distant in Victoria, who have a whole region of a quarter million population to worry about.

Without local accountability, the debate about the future of the island has, not surprisingly, degenerated into the worst sort of arbitrary ad hockery, slanderous backbiting and tangles of conflicts of interest, potential and otherwise.

The minister should waste no time in banging a few heads together on the island. He hasn't the power as minister to impose municipal government on Salt Spring, but it might be a good idea to bring in special legislation (as the NDP did in the case of the Whistler ski area) to make Salt Spring a special resort or island municipality.

The arguing would probably continue just as loudly, but at least islanders would have to get on, finally, with the job of cleaning up the messy situation that exists today. Responsibility would lie where it belongs, with Salt Spring Island.

Asking the Wrong Question

TORONTO — It seems that Ed Ziemba, member of the Ontario legislature for High Park-Swansea and sometime resident of Toronto's Don Jail, has created legal and parliamentary history. Nothing quite like him has ever happened before.

All sorts of things, including imprisonment, have happened to parliamentarians over the centuries and all sorts of prohibitions, commonly called "privileges," have been developed to counter them. They are all catalogued in Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice, the recognized Bible on parliamentary law. But there's no precedent for the Ziemba case.

Perhaps that's only to be expected because Ziemba's predicament is not supposed to happen. Members of parliament aren't supposed to be put in jail for making speeches in parliament. It's unthinkable. Sir Erskine May must be rolling in his grave.

Irregularities

Nevertheless, Ed Ziemba did end up in the Don because of a speech he gave in the legislature on March 12, 1976. In that speech, he revealed evidence of irregularities in Ontario health insurance payments to a Toronto medical laboratory. He said his information came from employees of the laboratory and he said he had turned most of it over to the police. He said the situation indicated the need for reform of the system whereby medical laboratories are paid by OHIP.

The police, after further investigation, charged the Toronto laboratory and its owners with fraud. The crown did not call Ziemba as part of its case at the preliminary hearing; there was no need to. But the defendants, claiming a conspiracy by employees to hurt the laboratory, called him as a defence witness and asked him who supplied the information.

Ziemba refused to say, on the ground he had received it confidentially and his work as a member of the legislature would be vitiated if he violated such confidences. Eventually the judge packed him off to jail for six days for refusing to answer, as a judge, apparently, has the power to do under section 472 of the Criminal Code.

At this writing, Ziemba has served his six days and is at liberty, pending an adjournment of the case while the judge ponders where he goes from here. He could put Ziemba back in jail.

This has promoted a demand from Ziemba's NDP colleagues in the legislature that a law be passed saying a judge, in these circumstances, can't do that to an MPP, which raises a moot point. Constitutionally, the Criminal Code is exclusively the responsibility of the federal parliament; it may be that the desired provincial law is beyond the competence of the legislature.

Attorney-General Roy McMurtry has therefore asked the Ontario Court of Appeal for its opinion, by way of reference under the Constitutional Questions Act. But McMurtry, who seems to have a talent for lousing legal matters up, has put the wrong question to the court.

The question reads: "Does the legislative assembly of Ontario have the power to enact legislation protecting its members from being compelled by a court in a criminal case to disclose the existence, source or content of a communication from an informant?"

Put this way, the answer of the Court of Appeal will almost certainly be no. The question is far too broad. One can easily conceive of circumstances where a member of the legislature should be required, in the public interest, to disclose the source of information confidentially received. And if such information were required in a criminal case, only the federal parliament could provide exceptions.

What the Court of Appeal should have been asked is: "Does the legislative assembly have the power to enact legislation protecting its members from being compelled by a court in a criminal case to disclose the source of information which such members give to the assembly?"

In short, the real issue is one of parliamentary free speech. A distinction has to be made between any information a member may receive in any context and information which is clearly related to his parliamantary function and responsibility. In the first category, a member is and should be compellable as a witness in a court of law; in the second, he should not be.

The distinction may be hard to draw abstractly but not so hard in practice. In Ziemba's case, for example, he used his information to make a speech in the legislature which led to reforms and the saving of millions of public dollars. Since his information indicated criminal offences might be involved, he also told the police. But it is crystal clear that if he had not made the speech, the accused persons would not be in a position in court to ask who told him and the courts would not be in a position to jail him for refusing to say.

Parliamentarians have a responsibility to speak out in parliament when they hear of, or suspect maladministration in public programs. They can be answerable to no one but parliament and their voters. If it becomes settled that they can be compelled by the courts, on pain of imprisonment, to say who told them, then people will stop telling them things which, in the public interest, should be told.

Not Answerable

If the issue has been put this way, it seems to me the Court of Appeal would have no great problem in asserting that the legislature does indeed have the power to legislate so as to protect its members from the exigencies, in certain circumstances, of section 472 of the Criminal Code.

Indeed, the Court might well say that the law, correctly interpreted, already gives such protection. After all, the Canadian Bill of Rights (which is federal legislation) already says, in effect, that the Criminal Code must not be construed or applied so as to authorize a court to compel a person to give evidence if he is denied "constitutional safeguards."

One constitutional safeguard which all parliaments in Canada enjoy, by virtue of the British Bill of Rights of 1689 and the British North America Act of 1867, is that "freedom of speech and debates or proceedings in Parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned an any court or place out of Parliament."

RICHARD GWYN

UnCanadian Speculation

OTTAWA — The observation, made in a weekend magazine, that unless jobs are found for the surplus of university graduates, "they may be scarred for life," has to be one of the silliest of 1977 so far.

Who really believes that these young people, if temporarily jobless, will be more than temporarily bruised? Indeed, might they not be the hardier and the more mature for the experience, in contrast to their feather-bedded predecessors of the 1960s?

There just ain't, in Ottawa or anywhere else, any money any more, quite aside from the morality of subsidizing middle-class children in unnecessary jobs immediately after massively subsidizing their higher education.

In play here are some troubling questions. Should we cut back university enrolment by half or more to fit the labor market? If not, how do we justify the waste of scarce public funds? If so, how do we select who will enter the new elite?

State Capitalism

Such choices are unfamiliar. For years we've been able to assume we could do everything all at once — that we could, for example, build more and more factories and simultaneously clean up pollution, or offer higher education to almost everyone and not worry whether we shouldn't have spent the money elsewhere.

Except as a clash between vested-interests (the children of the middle class vs. unemployed maritimes adults), political choices have meaning only when they can be tested against the standard of some intellectual and moral set of beliefs.

Here the real difficulty begins. For decades, our ideology, now so entrenched it seems more like simple common sense, has been liberalism. Its intellectual starting-points were a belief in the application of reason to all problems and in the perfectibility of man. In practice, this enlightened individualism has been allied to state capitalism. Economic growth has become a self-defining good (the duty of governments thus has become to help corporations to grow) and welfare has become a substitute for income distribution (this because income distribution would prevent individuals from bettering themselves, and so indirectly, better others).

The time of liberalism is past. It can no longer, faced by high energy prices, and more important in the long run, high food prices, guarantee economic growth. Individualism pursued as the supreme goal has produced statistics more worrisome than those of the gross national product. The more than one marriage in four that now ends in divorce, the more than one child in 10 now brought up by a single parent, the phenomenon, unique in history, of a significant part of an entire generation choosing to have no children at all so that they can better fulfill themselves as individuals.

GEORGE KENNAN
... the system's inadequate

Everyone today is chronicling the "death" of liberalism. "The American Idea, of unlimited possibilities and the transformation of humanity ... is no longer tenable," writes William Pfaff in the New Yorker magazine. "It is frightening knowlege, hardly utterable, opening us to a strange future." In September's Encounter magazine, U.S. intellectual and former ambassador, George Kennan wrote: "I do not think our political system is adequate to the needs of the age we are living in."

Intellectual speculation, when practised in public, is un-Canadian. A brave exception, is the just-published, The Liberal Idea of Canada, by James and Robert Laxer. Its central thesis is that "Canada's postwar economic strategy has failed." This liberal, and Liberal, strategy, the Laxers write, has been to sell off resources in exchange for foreign capital.

"Through the structure of a branch plant economy, Canada has achieved economic growth without development," they write, meaning that although we've got richer, our economy is as immature (a $10 billion manufacturing deficit in 1975) as it was just after the Second World War — with the difference that the U.S. less and less needs our natural resources.

Beyond liberalism lies what? Socialism, in the sense of a planned economy and of real income-redistribution? Conservativism, in its original sense that the small (a community, a business) is more beautiful than the bureaucratic? Or some form of authoritarianism?

Tragic Failures

I used to think of myself as a liberal, but do so no longer without knowing now where to hang my intellectual hat. Probably the philosophy of Red Toryism, which is not, as is sometimes thought, a kind of soft-core socialism but an attempt to reconcile two concepts that at times are opposed — a belief in community values and belief in social justice. (Reconciliation becomes difficult, to give a personal example, in the case of the resettlement of Newfoundland outports: do you go with the community values of identity, belonging and continuity, or with the social justice of mainland-style jobs, well-equipped schools and paved roads?)

I have no startling, post-liberal, insights to offer, except, (admittedly this is a cop-out) to express the conviction that we must construct a new set of intellectual and moral concepts, or risk, as Kennan wrote about the U.S. which is the most liberal country of all, "failures which cannot be other than tragic."

Rent Aid

This is in reply to a letter which appeared in the Times May 30 regarding the upcoming changes to the renter's tax credit programme and the new Shelter Aid for Elderly Renters (SAFER) program.

With regard to the renter's tax credit, the program is being modified, not cancelled. All renters in British Columbia, regardless of age, will continue to be eligible for the $100 renter's tax credit. However, starting in 1978, senior citizens must choose to receive assistance under either the SAFER program OR the renter's tax credit program, whichever is to their advantage. The vast majority of those in need will receive greatly increased benefits under the SAFER program. For example, a senior citizen with an income of $3,400 a year and a rent of $175 a month, would qualify for a renter's tax credit of $100 a year. Under the SAFER program, the same person would qualify for $810 a year.

Also effective in 1978, the $80 a year guaranteed minimum renter's tax credit for those over age 65 will be eliminated. I must stress, it is only the guarantee that is being eliminated; the renter's tax credit program will continue but assistance will be calculated solely on the basis of need. The renter's tax credit is calculated on the basis of $100 minus one per cent of net taxable income. Hence, a couple would need to have an income in excess of $15,000 a year before they would become completely ineligible for the renter's tax credit.

The SAFER program will provide assistance to those elderly renters who pay in excess of 30 per cent of their income on rent. For a single person, the maximum amount of assistance available is $70 a month, and the maximum rent which can be claimed is $175 a month. For a couple, the maximum amount of assistance available is $50 a month, and the maximum rent which can be claimed is $200 a month. Senior citizens with rents higher than these maximums may still qualify for SAFER. However, we will only recognize the first $175 of rent for a single person and the first $200 of rent for a couple.

A single senior citizen with an income of $290 a month and a rent of $175 a month is presently paying 60 per cent of his or her income on shelter. Under the SAFER program, this person would receive $66 a month and, as a result, would pay only 38 per cent of his or her income on shelter.

The majority of our senior citizens prefer to stay in their established homes in familiar surroundings. They wish to remain as a contributing member of their neighborhood; by providing a direct cash subsidy to the individual, the SAFER program allows them to do so. — Hugh A. Curtis, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing.

We Belong

Strangely enough I find I must disagree with Rosemary Brown in relation to the incident in the legislature.

Pat Jordan is not a racist, or maybe rather she is not only a racist. Her remark that if you don't like something here you should go back to your own country is an insult to all Canadians not born in this country, regardless of race (and that must include Bill Vander Zalm).

We belong here. This is our country. We chose it and became citizens here and that gives us the same right as everybody else to enjoy the many good things, but also the right and duty to criticize what we do not think is right, and most of all to work to make life better for us all, in B.C., in Canada, and all over the world. — Sven Rasmussen, 8449 West Saanich Rd.

Teachers' Rights

Surely, one of the most important human rights is the freedom to marry the person of one's choice without being punished for that decision. It is appalling, therefore, to read that two women teachers in Ontario, working for a Catholic School Board, were fired because they were married outside the Roman Catholic church. This situation would possibly be acceptable if it were the action of a private school, privately financed. However, in Ontario all Catholic schools are publicly funded up to Grade Ten.

In B.C. we should be particularly interested in these firings which were upheld by the Ontario Supreme Court because the Catholic School Board had "the right under the British North American Act to select, employ or dismiss qualified teachers in accordance with the denominational requirements of their schools."

There is nothing in Bill 33 to protect the hundreds of teachers who would be employed in a publicly-financed Catholic school system from being deprived of the right to marry whom they wish without being forced to lose their jobs. The taxpayers of B.C. should also have the freedom from compulsory taxation to support the religious beliefs of others. Bill 33 should be withdrawn.—J. W. Gilmore, Coquitlam.

The New Nihilism: Punk Rock and Revulsion Chic

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
New York Times

Punk is sweeping the country.

In popular music, a raucous, mock-violent sound rapes the eardrum: "punk rock" it is called — or snarled. "Groove with me in the gutter, girl," is the message of such groups as the Sex Pistols, who blaze their dum-dums through the filigree of old Elvis-the-Pelvis establishment-rock minuets.

In faddist fascist fashion, the apparent new nihilism is expressed in revulsion chic: savage tears in material is de rigeur, rusty razor blades jangle nervously from catgut string, and a dashing cape made from an old black plastic garbage bag is the new plus ultra.

In politics, too, the trend toward the glorification of super sloppiness has been noted writer-in-residence Bob Greene of The Washington Star has explored "imperial punk," admonishing professional rednecks Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell to take their feet off the White House furniture.

Whence this phenomenon? Who are these insects that have been spraying themselves with people-repellent?

First, to etymology. Slanguist Eric Partridge speculates that punk is hobo lingo to describe very stale bread, perhaps from the French "pain."

Punk, applied to a person, began as a slang term for a catamite, or boy kept by a pederast, and later was extended to cover young hoodlums. In both substance and person, the word "punk" has always been used pejoratively, and usually carries the dual connotation of youth and degeneracy.

Now to pseudo-sociology. The success of punk in music and fashion springs from a rebellion against the material success of rebel leaders. On the current cover of establishment-rock's Rolling Stone (a vastly successful enterprise that has become a Carter administration house organ), three rock stars clad in precious white silken polyester, who call themselves the Bee Gees (from narcotics slang "boy and girl," a mixture of dope unless it's an innocent reminiscence of Benny Goodman) appear to be very wealthy young people.

The multi-million dollar contracts of these idols are turning off some of their audience. Today's rebels-without-causes long for genuine grime, not plastic grime. They prefer bloodied local club fighters to rich televised champions, and identify with unsuccessful slobs rather than with millionaire musicians who exploit unsuccessful slobs.

Similarly, in fashion, with respectability now clinging to jeans and obscene T-shirts, the young rebs need something of their own, and have moved farther out to the studied kookiness of safety pins and dog chains. En masse, they are scuttling like lemmings to their idea of individuality — that is, the uniform of the nonconformist, in the regiment of the unregimented.

We now know where punk came from and why it is here. Now to a crucial question: is punk good or bad?

Jerking weak knees, middle-agers tend to waggle our heads and say "bad." After all, it is an inversion of values: a punk-head may be attracted by an attention-getting display of offensiveness, but distaste is not taste; violence is not tenderness. To be in revolt, one does not need to be revolting. A new nihilism, excusable among Egyptians, is hardly the American way of life.

But wait: the aficionados of punk, impressing their sourheart with ostentatious rags, are invaluable to a new breed of news transmitters known as the trendustry. Students of mass communication now have a barium to trace the flow of a fad. Photo editors weary of Andy Young and Margaret Trudeau now have fresh, new celebrities to feature. The golden-daffodil hosts of talk-show society have different guests to book and a different topic to pick over. The avant-guardians of Seventh Avenue have a new challenge of adaptation and expensification. Every magazine art director is scrambling to his post.

The trendustry will treat punk with condescension, loftily bejeweling the razor blades and subtly altering the revolting sound. Editorialists will deplore the exaltation of sado-masochism in song and dress.

Grooving in the gutter

All wrong. For the punk culture is one extended, mocking snicker.

The proponents of punk are spoofing the record companies, the clothing designers, the moviegoers who gape at Jaws and wiggle their toes in The Deep and jog to The Exorcist. The satiric punk innovators are flaying the audience that loves to be titillated by violence as well as the trendustry that thrives on the need for a different drummer every month.

The godfather of punk is England's Anthony Burgess, author of "A Clockwork Orange," a novel and movie of a few years ago that satirized our love of violence by portraying a future society run by goons. Their violent-looking clothes and makeup are the guiding spirit of punk.

"Horror show" was the goons' favorite adjective, meaning terrific. Most of us thought the irony lay in equating horror with goods; but author Burgess, who is also an eminent linguist, had something deeper in mind: "horror show" was a play on "horosho," the expression for "good" in the Soviet Union.

Only a word play? Perhaps; but the brief and meteoric emergency of punk is rooted in a satiric reminder of the potential for brutality that lurks in every one of us.

Violence in the Parks

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

I'm not a camper, but a lot of people are—and the situation on holiday weekends in Ontario provincial park campsites is becoming some sort of a war.

On one side are the authorities, backed by campers who ask only to be allowed peace and quiet.

On the other are apparently growing numbers of people who are reflected in startling statistics from the last long weekend, six weeks ago.

Over the whole parks system, the four days ending May 24 had 1163 of what the weekly reports to Dr. Keith Reynolds, deputy minister of Natural Resources, called "rowdyism occurrences"—ranging from public urinating and sexual acts, excessive noise, physical violence and drunkenness to other hassling of quiet campers. Persons involved: 3744. Verbal warnings, 4613. Persons evicted, 1799. Charges laid, 1012.

Letters from outraged campers sketch in a picture of bottles being thrown into quiet campsites, public love-making, a whole gamut of behavior objectionable to anyone who wasn't taking part. Ministry of Natural Resources personnel try to keep the lid on, but in bad situations haven't enough manpower.

The conundrum is what to do about it. The provincial park campsites originally were intended as low-cost, well-organized places where campers could go about their own business, cooking outdoor meals, swimming, fishing, playing games, pulling out a few days later to go home refreshed. That reckoned without the people, perhaps unable to cut loose in their home surroundings, who see a camping weekend as a chance to let it all hang out, and to hell with the squares who don't like it. Beer and liquor, for young people who don't know how to handle it or when to stop, causes most of the trouble. Chaperones or even responsible attitudes in some campsites are as rare as whooping cranes.

The campsites, of course, will not be closed down. There might be some advantage in segregating camp areas by age, but that would inevitably locate some quiet young people in a wild atmosphere they dislike as much as their elders do. Extra enforcement officers, extra police, were assigned to the parks for that holiday weekend a month ago; without much result except that there were more evictions and charges laid.

That's the problem. What's the solution? No one knows.

Civil Servants Get Taste of Reality

By CHRISTINE DOYLE
London Observer

Civil servants are being given the opportunity to work among people who might otherwise be only paper "cases" on their desks.

Under a scheme proposed by Dr. Alec Dickson, founder of Voluntary Services Overseas and Honorary Director of Community Service Volunteers, three government departments agreed to "let out" some young civil servants for six months at a time.

The first guinea pig was Denise Bentley, 25. Normally an executive officer with the Home Office, Miss Bentley completed six months last week as "resources raiser" for battered wives at the Family Crisis Centre in Southwark, London.

It has been a rewarding, if unnerving, experience. Usually she is cocooned in the womb-like atmosphere of an office where people are "instructed" to do things, "guidance" circulars are sent out and ball-point pens are requisitioned on a form.

At the Centre, where nothing is taken for granted, everything had to be fought for.

Miss Bentley, who continued to be paid by the Home Office, chose to raise resources. "I wrote hundreds of letters to local firms and to departments or larger ones. I found it very difficult to write asking for something for nothing. But in the end I realized that people do like to be asked for help."

Some wrote to say they had already given to the Chiswick Women's Aid which, with battling Mrs. Erin Pizzy, was first in the field. But carpets, curtains, pillows and even a photocopier trickled in. "Some people didn't even write back; they just sent something."

Her crowning achievement was to procure two minibuses. With one of them she arranged, through a friend, a trip to the Blue Peter studios for children of the battered wives. Continuing her efforts, she says they still need a van.

She found the internal democracy at the centre time-consuming, but just — in such centres workers and the women take joint decisions. "We spent a very long time deciding if I should ask Prince Charles to open a refuge. Quite a few were against him because he was a man."

She did not work directly with the battered wives, but they seemed to feel that her presence there was Home Office "recognition" of a sort, of battered wives' problems. She was concerned for the children.

"I've never come across children like that before. The parents are so involved with their own problems, they don't have so much to give to their children."

But she remained a civil servant despite her jeans. "I never really felt I had a label before. I was even introduced as 'our Civil Servant.'"

Department of Employment and Department of Environment civil servants are following Miss Bentley. One is already working at the CSV headquarters. Dr. Dickson would like more exchanges so that those who govern have direct experience of the problems involved.

Classroom Role Models

russell baker

Anita Bryant's triumph over homosexuality in Miami reminded me of schoolteachers. There was a lot of discussion in that dispute about teachers and whether their sexual proclivities do or do not influence children and, if they do, whether homosexual teachers can divert the young from the heterosexual path.

People who took Miss Bryant's view that they may talked about teachers as "role models". Lacking fluency in the sociological tongue, a language almost as difficult as Basque, I am unclear what a "role model" is, but those who used the term seemed to be saying that teachers are people children tend to emulate. In any event, many Miamians must have thought their children would become homosexual if subjected to homosexual teachers.

That prompted me to ponder teachers I haven't seen, and scarcely thought about, for decades, and for the first time I reflected on how their sex lives had affected my own. My first thought was that it was curious, perhaps perverse, that I have not turned out to be a spinster.

Nowadays, I know, spinsters have been eliminated from society by the lexicographers of the feminist movement, but there were still quite a few 40 years ago, and most of them seemed to gravitate to school-teaching. Until eighth grade, I did not realize that males were permitted to teach school, and my impression was that married females were almost as unwelcome in the trade.

If the teacher was a "role model," parents were obviously unaware of it, for most of them surely did not want their children to grow up to be spinsters. Yet, despite almost constant tutelage by spinsters, I never felt the smallest temptation to indulge in spinsterism. When a group of us classmates sneaked off to somebody's cellar to play, we didn't play "spinster." We played "doctor," despite the fact that in those days you never found a medical man teaching elementary school.

Looking back, it seems we were always at least dimly aware of the sexuality of teachers, or in most cases, the absence of it. Even at an age foolishly thought to be innocent, one made certain assumptions about most of those teachers, and one of the firmest was that they had no sex life whatever. The idea of a teacher in the coils of rapture was as inconceivable as the idea of Herbert Hoover in Bermuda shorts. Yet very, very few of us, I suspect, were seduced by these "role models" into the juiceless life of celibacy.

At age 11, I and the other males in my class were stirred by the spectacle of a teacher who, though unmarried, was definitely not a spinster. Definitely not. She wore no girdle in the battle against ignorance. I—and, I am sure, 15 other men my age—still remember her voluptuous chalk movements at the blackboard as she struggled to help us grasp the distinction between a sentence's subject (one chalk line underneath) and its predicate (two lines underneath). Until then I had never seen a teacher fight ignorance without her armor on.

Was she a "role model"? Perhaps. To this day I enjoy lecturing helpless children on the finer points of English grammar, which is almost as difficult as Basque grammar and may, therefore, suggest that that teacher led me down the path to sadism.

High school — it was an all-male establishment — exposed me to masculinity at the blackboard. The teachers wore three-piece suits and smelled of forbidden cigarettes which they were allowed to puff unseen between classes in private hideaways. One assumed them to be married and, therefore, beyond sex. Being for the most part dull, they made marriage seem dull and sexless, yet I already knew that I would someday marry, and knew with equal certainty that even though married I would not turn my back on sex. Sex was what the football captain was up to and, though not yet ready for operations at that rarified level, I was confident that once I was, I would not wither away as teachers did.

I had at least two homosexual teachers in that school. They didn't tell us they were, but we all knew it. I learned to jeer about them when they were out of earshot and to laugh about "queers," but I learned it from my "role models" in the schoolyard, and not from them.

One of them was largely responsible for encouraging a classmate to pursue a form of art at which he is now one of the world's best practitioners, besides being a family man. The other woke me to the amazing fact that in life there was also wit. The teacher I most wanted to emulate, however, was single, drank wine and had been gassed in World War I. Of this three admirable traits, there was only one I wanted to copy, and sure enough, to this day I love the sound of a popping cork.

this summer ....take in a forest

At Rayonier Canada we believe that the forests can provide for recreation as well as the growing and harvesting of forest crops.

Pursuing this philosophy, we have provided camping and picnic facilities in the southern and northern parts of Vancouver Island, as well as hiking trails and viewpoints of interest. These facilities have been carefully designed by our divisional foresters and their staff. We have found that the vast majority of the public respect the safety and fire regulations that are imposed to conserve the forests and so we welcome visitors into these areas.

Try a beachside lunch in the serene surroundings of the Jordan River picnic site located just 45 miles from Victoria. And after lunch. . .a 15-mile leisurely drive westward to Sombrio Point where you can hike along trails provided by the Jordan River Logging Division of Rayonier Canada. Ready to greet you is a sweeping view of Juan De Fuca Strait, tidal pools and stretches of sandy beach.

Or. . .visualize quiet lakes nestled in the northern regions of the Island where you can fish, swim and boat, with overnight campsites so you can really explore and enjoy this natural forest setting.

Or. . . see the wonder of forest streams as they find their way to the Pacific, running throughout both the southern and northern forestlands . . . another adventure offering recreational conveniences for your holiday pleasure.

During periods of extremely hot weather, it is suggested a check be made with the nearest Forest Service or company logging division office, to determine if the area you wish to visit is open. Those planning a trip to Northern Vancouver Island are reminded that services are widely dispersed, therefore, it would be best to plan carefully before making a trip to that region.

To assist you, Rayonier Canada has published a Visitors Guide to Northern Vancouver Island, as well as the Jordan River District in the Southern part of the Island, available at many tourist information outlets or obtainable by contacting the Public Relations Department, Rayonier Canada Limited, 1111 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3H1.

We hope you enjoy your visit this summer!

Talks Focus on Pensions

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Interior Forest Labor Relations Association, representing forest companies, made a major contract offer on pensions in talks Tuesday with the International Woodworkers of America, said John Todman, IFLRA president.

Informed sources said the offer could help negotiations for a contract for all British Columbia forest workers. Union negotiators are expected to meet Thursday with northern Interior employers in Prince George to discuss pensions.

The coast pension plan now covers IWA workers in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, while the two Interior associations have their own pension plans. The southern plan came into effect in 1973.

Sources also said that if the common pension plan is achieved, the union will drop its proposal demand for one master agreement for B.C. woodworkers and probably its resistance to a two-year contract.

Following Tuesday's talks, Todman said in an interview that the IFLRA is waiting for a union response to the offer.

He said the association suggested a joint committee be established to work out the mechanics of a joint plan.

The IFLRA has also matched a coast wage offer of 70 cents an hour over two years and Todman said the package is contingent on a two-year agreement.

Meanwhile, no talks took place between the pulp unions and forest companies Tuesday. The unions are said to be studying the latest company offer of an 84-cent an hour increase over two years.

The pulp unions and IWA have a base rate of $7.01 an hour.

Spill Killed Beavers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Up to 90 per cent of the beavers living on the banks of the Peace and Pine Rivers near the northern British Columbia-Alberta Border were killed by an oil spill May 27, biologist Jeff Chislotte said in a report to the provincial government.

Chislotte said there was a heavy loss of Canada goslings on the Pine River. There were also heavy fish losses in side channels and back waters of the rivers where fingerlings seek protection. Numbers were not available.

He said the 175,000-gallon Westcoast Petroleum Pipeline Co. spill, which occurred near Taylor, B.C., was apparently caused by a bend in a pipe carrying oil.

The report said further talks will be held with Westcoast to work out better contingency plans for any further spills.

CRASH DURING CHASE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An RCMP officer chasing a stolen car belonging to an off-duty policeman Tuesday collided with a third car, sending its occupant, Cheryl June Beesley, 49, to hospital.

Police said two youths were seen starting the car, parked at the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit. As the thieves were leaving, an RCMP officer arriving in his unmarked car was alerted and gave chase.

A few blocks away, the pursuing car — which was not equipped with a flashing light or siren — collided with Beesley's car, which was attempting a left turn.

Beesley was in satisfactory condition. The stolen car was found about an hour later but the thieves had disappeared.

CP Air Files for $29,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air has filed a petition for bankruptcy of another travel company it says owes it more than $29,000 from air ticket sales.

The ageney, Creative World Travel Ltd., is a sister company of World Tours Ltd. and Holiday Carousel Travel Ltd., both of which are bankrupt.

The bankruptcy of World Tours resulted from a petition last May by CP Air, saying it was owed $272,000 for air gravel tickets. A few weeks later, Holiday Carousel went bankrupt after Woodward's Stores claimed it had defaulted on rent on space leased in its stores.

Creative World Travel bought four retail outlets in Vancouver and one in Edmonton which it operated under its own name. When World Tours, which was partly funding Creative, went bankrupt, the company sold the outlets to former owners who now operate them.

Creative's total indebtedness is not known. A hearing on CP Air's petition is set for July 11.

BAIL OUT REFUSAL REGRETTED

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Monday he regrets the federal government's decision not to participate in a plan to bail out Queen Charlotte Fisheries Ltd., but, in the end, the company is to blame for its own problems.

"Put bluntly, the company waited too long before coming to us for aid, and the worst of it is that it is the former employees and the fishermen who will suffer," Phillips said in a news release.

The provincial government, through the B.C. Development Corp., offered $1 million to help the company, providing the federal government gave an additional $1 million but the federal government turned down the plan late last week.

The company runs fish canning operations in the Vancouver area. About 700 persons would have been employed at peak times this season, but the company said last month it is folding because of its inability to obtain necessary working capital.

"Had they approached us earlier, it is quite possible some financial aid could have been obtained for them on . . . as we see it . . . an equitable sharing basis with the federal government," said Phillips.

"But with the fishing season so close and the plant's operations being seasonal, our backs were to the wall.

LRB Rules for Mechanic In Union Activity Firing

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has ruled that a former Terrace garage mechanic is not entitled to reinstatement in his job although it agreed he was terminated in contravention of the B.C. Labor Code.

Board co-chairman John Baigent said in a written decision Monday that Pacific Northern Gas Ltd. would have ended employee Fred Glover's job regardless of an organizing drive by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in which he was active.

Baigent ruled, however, that the company acted with undue haste in informing Glover that he could accept a lower paid position in Burns Lake, or be terminated, and that it did so because of the organizing drive.

He ruled that Glover is entitled to six weeks pay rather than the month's pay granted by the company and that the company must re-offer Glover a job, although not necessarily at the same rate of pay.

Baigent said he could not accept the argument of company officials that their knowledge of Glover's involvement in union activities did not influence their decision to sub-contract the work he previously did.

He noted that a telex sent to Glover informing him that the work would be done elsewhere required him to reply within 3½ hours whether he would accept a junior position or termination.

"When pressed for a reason for the rush, the employer testified that it wished to resolve the issue prior to the commencement of negotiations with the association of employees whose agreement with the employer expired April 1," the written decision said.

"However, other evidence rebuts that explanation. Negotiations with the association were not imminent and the employer in its third telex to Glover readily accepted his request for two weeks to think things over."

Exploratory Talks Begin Between Union and Hotel

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Hotel Vancouver and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers started exploratory talks Tuesday, the first since the union went on strike nearly a month ago.

Mediator Clark Gilmour has remained in contact with both sides during the lengthy dispute, which began June 9 when 475 workers went on strike to back demands for a wage increase. The hotel didn't offer any increase.

Union officials said the talks were to determine whether or not there is any hope of resuming full-scale negotiations.

Markets Settle

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 700 Vancouver supermarket clerks, members of the Retail Clerks Union, have voted 94 per cent in favor of a new one-year agreement with retail food stores.

The agreement, which is retoractive to April 1, will give most union members a 64 cent-an-hour increase, although students will get less. The increases will bring a cashier's pay to $7.42 an hour, while other clerks will get $8.12 an hour.

Band Parades

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 700 armed forces personnel from three countries will be part of this year's Sea Festival parade.

United States Marines, French and Canadian forces members and the Naden Armed Forces Band from Esquimalt will fill out the parade July 10.

Two on Bail

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Two Clearwater men charged after a series of fires in Clearwater last week were released Monday on their own recognizance following an appearance in provincial court.

Yvon Beausoleil, 32, and George Andrew Dekelver, 23, were arrested after three successive fires were set Thursday in a bulk gasoline plant, at a service station and on a roadway in Clearwater.

Both men will appear in court July 12.

50 Locked Out

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — About 50 employees of two automobile sales firms here were locked out Tuesday in a dispute over a new collective agreement.

The employees of Fred Walls and Son and Prince George Motors are members of the International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-424.

A company spokesman said the lockout started at 8 a.m. but declined to comment further. An IWA spokesman said the dispute concerned a company offer, rejected by members last week.

Chips to Sweden

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Final negotiations will begin this week on a multi-million dollar deal to sell wood chips to Sweden, Hugh Cooper, interim president of Fibreco Export Co., said Tuesday.

Cooper said a letter of intent between his company, representing independent British Columbia chip producers, and Swedish pulp producers was signed June 16.

"It looks quite hopeful," he said. "There are not too many obstacles in place."

The deal calls for 100,000 bone dry units (120,000 tons) of wood chips to be sold to Sweden annually for the next five years. Some timber industry sources say the price could go as high as $50 a BDU.

Transit First

VANCOUVER (CP) — If the federal government wants to conserve energy, it should put money into public transportation instead of home insulation, Mayor Jack Volrich said Tuesday.

Volrich, who is president of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, was commenting on Ottawa's $1.4 billion program to help homeowners upgrade insulation. The program, announced last week, will make federal grants of up to $350 available to homeowners.

"I believe that spending this phenomenal amount of money on transportation improvements across the country would have been an eminently wiser decision," Volrich said.

Fluoridation Majority Urged in B.C.

The B.C. Social Planning and Review Council said in a brief Tuesday that the provincial government should recognize approval of fluoridation plebiscites by a simple majority of voters.

The council said in a brief to Health Minister Bob McClelland that "a small but vociferous group" is holding up the fluoridation of B.C. drinking water.

B.C., which has the lowest percentage of fluoridated water drinkers, requires a 60-per-cent majority of have local water supplies fluoridated, the council said.

MILL PLANS LOG YARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Forest Products Ltd. said Tuesday it will build a $3.6-million log-handling project near its pulp and newsprint mill at Crofton on Vancouver Island.

Harry Dembicki, vice-president of logging and wood supply, said in a statement the 20-acre facility would begin operating in 1978 and would be the final step in a 15-year plan to modernize BCFP's log-handling and processing system.

He said the project would virtually end log losses in B.C. coastal waters. The logs will be bundled to prevent sinking and escaping while in water and will be sorted on land.

U.S. Spy Plane to Map Okanagan Lake Weeds

KELOWNA (CP) — The ministry of environment is escalating its war on the Eurasian milfoil infesting lakes in the Okanagan Valley.

Karl Marsden, provincial biologist in charge of the experimental 2,4-D program, said Tuesday the United States Army Corps of Engineers will fly a U-2 reconnaissance over the lakes later this month to photograph and map weed-infested areas.

"We suspect the area of infestation has increased from the 1,000 acres reported last year to about 2,000 acres this year, although we won't know for sure until surveys have been done," said Marsden.

"The provincial ministry of environment is working closely with American officials to combat the weed infestation."

Marsden said U.S. officials are concerned that the weed could spread into the Columbia River system, creating a problem similar to the infestation that once threatened power plants on the Tennessee River.

The new infrared photography technique to be used is sensitive enough to record weed types as well as infested areas from an altitude of 30,000 feet.

FIVE ESCAPE COPTER CRASH

VANCOUVER (CP) — An electronic distress signal led to the rescue Tuesday of three persons aboard a helicopter while two others walked out to a logging camp.

None of the five aboard the helicopter which crashed was injured. One survivor said the machine stalled and went into trees.

High Stockpiles, Competition Make Woods Outlook Glum

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Council of Forest Industries president Don Lanskail says the outlook is "not too rosy" for wood products during the last half of 1977.

Markets will continue to be weak for pulp and plywood. Sales are fairly good for newsprint but no improvement is expected. Lumber sales were good during the first half of 1977 but will be weaker during the next six months.

The main problems are high stockpiles and stiff competition between rival producers.

The pulp market has been weak for most of the decade due to a world surplus. In Sweden, the government has had a policy of stockpiling pulp so its workers would continue to be employed during weak market conditions. This has resulted in a current stockpile of 2.8 million to 3 million tons of pulp, when the market can absorb no more than 1 million tons of reserve.

The Swedish government has recently backed away from this policy and now will allow layoffs. But it will take more than one year before the benefits of this are felt in terms of the world supply.

Newsprint sales have been fairly good but will not grow until there is a marked improvement in the North American economy. Newsprint demand is related directly to the number of pages in North American newspapers. Papers tend to be thicker, due to heavier advertising, when consumers are in a spending mood.

Lumber sales were good during the first half of the year, especially in comparison to 1975 anl 1976. Housing starts are expected to increase 30 per cent in the U.S. this year, which should mean an identical percentage increase in lumber sales.

Lumber stockpiling began in January and continued through to May. U.S. firms were buying large stocks because of the construction boom south of the border and in anticipation of possible closures in British Columbia later in the year.

Wage discussions are continuing and an extensive layoff of B.C. loggers is expected due to a high fire hazard. Since last August the west coast of the province has been in drought conditions and there is very little snow at high elevations to keep the woods moist.

Lanskail said lumber sales should improve after the present stockpiles are used up but it is impossible to predict how soon that would be.

"There is nothing to indicate the lumber market will improve before the end of the year. In fact, we expect it will be softer than during the first six months."

Plywood sales are also in a slump. Most plywood production is used within Canada where construction has been slow this year. In addition, some U.S. producers are able to compete in British Columbia, cutting into the already shrinking market.

Housing starts in B.C. are expected to total only 30,000 this year, down from 38,000 in 1976.

A surplus of accommodation is particularly acute in Victoria and some sections of the Vancouver area.

Canadian TV Sales Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales of Canadian-made color television sets totalled 19,014 in May while sales of black-and-white sets were 1,850, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Both totals were well below figures for a year earlier when 23,412 Canadian-made color and 2,411 black-and-white sets were sold.

Canadian manufacturers, especially those making color sets, have been facing increasing competition from foreign producers in recent years.

Hudson's Bay

Production has begun at a new copper-zinc mine 16 miles southeast of Flin Flon, Man., Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. of Toronto announced. The Centennial Mine, discovered in 1970 and named to commemorate Manitoba's 100th year as a province, has proven reserves of 1.6 million tons to the 1,200-foot level. The ore is trucked to the company's facilities at Flin Flon for processing. Hudson Bay has eight producing mines in the Flin Flon area.

Mechanical Planter Tested for Trees

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Forest Service is testing a device which plants trees mechanically and, which if successful, could reduce the cost of planting trees.

The device, which is drawn by a bulldozer and requires two men to operate, is nearing the end of a trial planting run near Vanderhoof, where it is planting 25,000 seedlings on a 50-acre area.

The rig, called a modified Taylor drum coulter, was also used to plant 70,000 seedlings near Quesnel.

A blade in front of the bulldozer clears away rocks and other debris. A disk on a device towed behind the bulldozer digs a 12-inch deep furrow, in which one of the operators drops a seedling at eight-foot intervals. Two slanted wheels force earth back into the furrows, surrounding the seedlings and completing the planting process.

Robin Brown of the Forest Service's reforestation division said Monday the device can plant 4,500 seedlings a day, compared with 1,400 by a two-man crew planting by hand. The machine still has some problems, however, and is most efficient on flat ground, he said.

The machine plants at a cost of 13 cents a seedling, compared to 20 cents for forestry crews and 12 cents for contract planting.

DOUBLE-BARRELLED QUEBEC PLEDGE

Language Bill Exempts Natives

QUEBEC (CP) — The native peoples of northern Quebec were told Tuesday they would be exempted from the government's proposed French language law.

Premier Rene Levesque told delegates attending the annual meeting of the Grand Council of the Cree in Fort Rupert, 500 miles northeast of here, the proposed French Language Charter would be amended and an affirmation of their rights also would be written into the law's preamble.

The same message was given by Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin to representatives of Naskapi Indians and Inuit during hearings on the bill by a national assembly committee.

Laurin told the native people the amendments would guarantee schooling in their own language as well as in their second language, which is English.

Organizations set up by the native people also would be exempt from provisions in the law requiring that the working language be French.

The present version of the language charter says native people can receive education in their own language or in French.

English, which is the second language of the Indians and Inuit of Northern Quebec, is excluded.

Zebedee Nungak, vice-president of the Northern Quebec Inuit Association (NQIA), led the group in a bilingual presentation to the legislature committee.

As association members aired their views on the language law in Inuktituk, Nungak translated into English.

He began the presentation by saying the Inuit were the original inhabitants of Quebec, having first settled in the province 4,000 years ago.

French-speaking people—called "Oui-ouis" in the Inuit tongue—only had been in the province a scant 300 years, he said.

Nungak also stated the Inuit had acquired rights under the James Bay land settlement signed in 1975.

The Inuit were not against the French language, but they were against measures which would force them to use French, he said.

They believe the James Bay agreement gave them a right to control their destiny, he added, and they want guarantees for their language and culture.

He said they were opposed to any sort of timetable which would set stages for the Inuit to increase their use of French. But as time goes on they will use French more and more "in our own way, in our own time."

Nungak pointed out that English was also necessary for communications with the outside. He said that in communicating with Inuit in other parts of the north the common language was English because the dialects were so different.

Laurin said he understood their desire to maintain their Inuit culture, but he did not understand their wish to maintain the use of English.

He said the Inuit should be able to communicate with other Inuit in their own language.

Parliament Goes To the Dogs

OTTAWA (CP) — John Rodriguez (NDP — Nickel Belt) silenced Liberal hecklers in the Commons by barking at them.

He sounded much like a poodle or a fox terrier.

Conservative Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar) said: "Let's see what Hansard does with that."

Rodriguez replied: "Hansard only records words, not sounds."

In this case, the reporter for Hansard, the official record of parliament, recorded the Rodriguez outburts. It came out as "eeeeh."

"It was a squeaking sound," said Rodriguez.

DIEF PREDICTS FALL ELECTION

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will call an election this fall to get people thinking about something other than the economic conditions in Canada, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Tuesday.

Diefenbaker said the Prime Minister wants to "blind" people to what is happening economically in the country so will call an election, presenting himself as the "Savior of Canadian unity."

The Prime Minister will say he is the one who saved unity when "in reality, he destroyed it," the long-time Tory MP added.

Trudeau and Rene Levesque, premier of Quebec, have been "closer than peas in a pod" and the fighting between them is "a sham," he claimed, adding "God help Canada if Trudeau comes back as Prime Minister in a fall election.

FREE COLLEGE DEMANDED

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the National Indian Brotherhood says Indians have a right to be educated through university free of charge because of aboriginal rights granted under the British North America Act.

Noel Starblanket told the annual conference of Ontario chiefs Tuesday that he will push to have the federal cabinet adopt a policy paper, which was completed in 1973, giving Indians control of Indian education.

A meeting to discuss land surrender complaints, education rights and tax problems involving Canadian Indians is to be held Monday in Ottawa between officials of the NIB and a committee of 11 federal cabinet ministers. Economic development revisions also will be discussed at the meeting, Starblanket said.

Starblanket said the NIB also is demanding Indian corporations be given status under the Indian Act and, as such, be tax exempt.

Battered Loan Bill Axed by Abbott

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott said Tuesday he would bring in a new consumer credit bill this fall to replace a battered borrowers and depositors protection bill now languishing in a Commons committee.

The bill, which would have provided new rights for consumers in dealings with lending and deposit-taking companies as well as giving police tough new mechanisms to control loan sharks, will die a natural death when the Commons adjourns for the summer, likely next week.

It will wipe out about seven months of commitee work, forcing a return to square one.

"It's a frustrating task," Abbott said in an interview. "The procedure of the House is so cumbersome."

The bill was first promised by Prime Minister Trudeau during the 1974 election campaign and was introduced by Abbott last November.

Hailed as a new deal for consumers in the financial marketplace, it ran into stiff opposition from banks, finance and mortgage companies and other credit granters as being too cumbersome and too drastic in its influence on routine business practices.

Mortgage lenders, for example, said provisions that would limit the penalty for early repayment of a mortgage to three months' interest would force lenders into other investments such as bonds. This would reduce the supply of money and drive up its cost.

Consumer and labor groups objected to the removal of interest ceilings under the existing Small Loans Act and the replacement of the ceilings with a procedure for civil redress that would allow a borrower to force a lender to prove in court that the interest rate charged was justified.

They said the provision was too cumbersome and would never be used by the low-income borrowers it was designed to protect.

Finally, several provinces said many provisions of the bill were unconstitutional because they overlapped areas of provincial jurisdiction such as in contract law. They argued the bill would create redundant and often contradictory legislation that might force a company to violate one law while conforming with another.

$400,000 Down Drain

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Perrin Beatty accused the government Tuesday of throwing $400,000 of Canadian taxpayers' money "down the drain because of sloppy planning" at last year's Habitat conference in Vancouver.

The "unbelievable waste," Beatty said, was the result of overbooking of hotel rooms for conference delegates.

Pipeline Deadline Still Possible, Says PM

By DON BRAID
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Despite Opposition criticism, Prime Minister Trudeau said yesterday that a Sept. 1 deadline for a final cabinet decision on a northern gas pipeline "is still reachable."

He was responding in question period to claims by several opposition members, including NDP leader Ed Broadbent and Conservative James Gillies (Don Vallay), that not enough study had been made of the environmental and social impact of the proposed Alaska-Canada route.

The National Energy Board recommended Monday that the government approve an application from Foothills Yukon Ltd. for a pipeline along the Alaska Highway and then through Canada.

Trudeau said an expert study of the route is "supposed to be brought to the government on Aug. 1.

"We would contemplate making it public as soon thereafter as possible. The deadline of the end of August which we have imposed on ourselves is still reachable."

But, he added, "If I find it cannot be reached, I would consider suggestions from the leader of the NDP."

Trudeau also said he has no plans at present to ask U.S. President Jimmy Carter to delay his own selection of a route if Canada must delay.

"If the President of the United States wants to seek a delay, he will do so under his own steam," he said.

But he said there may be some communication on the matter between Canada and the U.S.

Doug Neil (PC — Moose Jaw) asked Mr. Trudeau if the government had alternate development plans for the Mackenzie Valley since the pipeline will not likely be built there.

"I am thinking specifically of the town of Inuvik which spent several million dollars on infrastructure at the instance of this government," he said.

Trudeau said the question could be discussed during a special house pipeline debate in August.

IMPERIAL HAVING SECOND THOUGHTS

OTTAWA (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. is the first of a long list of supporters of Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. of Toronto to have second thoughts about continuing the battle for a Canada-U.S. Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline after its formal rejection Monday by the National Energy Board.

In a carefully-worded statement issued by the company as a formal reaction to the NEB decision conditionally approving an Alcan Highway gas pipeline project, Imperial says it "has supported the pipeline proposed by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. as the most efficient way to deliver Canadian Arctic gas to Canadian markets."

The statement makes no reference to plans by Imperial to continue its support of Arctic Gas, though there is an important reference to the fact that Imperial will continue its extensive exploration program in the Mackenzie Delta "for the immediate future."

What is and is not said by Imperial, industry observers say, is the first strong indication that Canada's largest oil company doesn't want to get into a major battle to try to resurrect Arctic Gas, since the NEB report now seems to make that impossible.

Ruling Recognizes Claims Of Natives: Dene Leader

EDMONTON (CP) — The National Energy Board recommendation of an Alaska Highway gas pipeline route recognizes the kind of north the Dene people want, Indian spokesman George Erasmus said Tuesday.

Erasmus, president of the Northwest Territories Indian Brotherhood, said in a telephone interview from Yellowknife, that a decision to build a pipeline at all was "an injustice to the native people of the Yukon and to Canadians at large."

Debbie Delancey, a spokesman for a group of southern Canadian organizations supporting new native states in the north, said the route was chosen "under a lot of pressure from the United States" and without socio-economic or environmental research.

Rick Hardy, of the northwest territories metis association, said, however, the board's decision not to support a Mackenzie Valley route will take pressure off the federal government to settle native land claims in the valley.

"All we can depend on now is government handouts," Hardy said.

Schooner to Rescue

Saltbanker Has New Assignment In Gov't Program to Get Kids Sprung from Institutional Care

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A 37-year-old saltbanker is about to become a ship of hope for socially maladjusted youngsters in care of the human resources ministry.

The 98-ton Robertson II, built for fishing the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia with her catch salted down in the hold, is part of the provincial government's $40 million program to take children out of traditional institutional care.

The 107-foot schooner was last used for fishing in 1974 when she was bought by Victoria psychiatrist Philip Ney and sailed from Nova Scotia 8,000 miles via Panama to become the marine component of the Victoria-based Quest Star Society.

This non-profit organization aims at giving family and group experience in sailing, seamanship and outdoor living, offers a floating classroom environment for school children as young as 10 and gives adolescent and pre-adolescent youngsters the motivation to improve themselves by performing tasks directly affecting their well-being.

The human resources program will be the fifth activity of Quest Star. It already is involved in West Trek, Sail West, Sailor Maker and Sea Search, which include both camping and cruising from the west coast through Gulf Islands, mainland coast and Puget Sound.

They range from weekends to 12-days and a cost of about $18 a day per student.

Human resources facilities so far have been inadequate to give proper institutional care to disadvantaged, pre-delinquent and dropout children who could benefit by the Quest Star concept, the society said in a brief to the ministry.

Twenty-day cruises for such youngsters would avoid an institutional environment and demonstrate that many are capable of becoming normal, healthy, productive adults if they can only break out of their frustration and negativism.

Bob Wing, director of the shore program and sometime member of the Robertson's crew, said boys and girls are sometime turned off abruptly by their saltwater experience.

He recalls two young people who stepped aboard with the feeling they were being ripped off.

For two weeks after their cruise, nothing was heard from the pair. Then they started visiting the ship when it was in port and have been trying to get back aboard ever since — "as cabin boys or anything," Wing said.

The 20-day adventure sailing course approved by the human resources ministry would be aimed at motivating adolescents toward self-improvement.

Besides regular shipboard duties, they would involve a taste of commercial fishing.

Ney's programs began about five years ago in a small boat limited to 12 persons and was soon outgrown.

The Robertson II, located at Shelburne, N.S., had accommodation for 20 and by converting part of her hold to bunks, now sleeps 30 adults and children.

Groups are divided into watches with a member of the eight-man crew in charge of each watch which rotates every four hours. They learn skills like knots and splices, conning, navigation, ship husbandry, sail handling and terminology.

In addition they get a chance to handle small boats, swim, skin-dive, fish, sail small craft, have shore parties, sing-songs and ride the bosun's chair aloft into the rigging.

School classes save their pennies and come from as far as the Prairies to take the three to five-day Sea Search cruises.

Each child taking part is urged to raise at least 50 per cent of his own fee, with parents and sometimes the school making up the balance.

Classroom work is included in the cruise, augmented by the experience of catching live biology specimens minutes before the lecture or demonstration.

Wing and colleague Ron Lancaster say the popularity spreads by word of mouth, and "we measure success by the people who want to come back," as Wing put it.

"We get all kinds of letters saying what has happened to them," Lancaster added, showing a letter from a Grade seven student who was enthused about the ship and the way it was handled, the food, bunks and being hoisted in the bosun's chair.

A Prince George teacher wrote, "no other field trip is so rewarding . . . the students felt sad on their return. It involved students and teachers in shipboard activities . . . offered new and different situations and meaningful experience."

"On that cruise it rained every single day," Wing commented. "That was the best cruise we've had. It didn't dampen their spirits at all."

He said both the shipboard and camping experience gives youngsters a feeling of self-worth they may never have before felt, simply by hauling up the ship's 2,000 feet of sail or pitching a tent to keep dry on the trail.

They Want To Return

The Victoria-based Quest Star Society says it measures the success of its varied programs aboard Robertson II by the people who want to come back.

"No other field trip is so rewarding," wrote a Prince George teacher, reflecting the feelings of his students.

Popularity of the programs has spread by word of mouth, says shore program director Bob Wing (inset).

Three Quick Fires Blamed on Vandals

Vandals are believed responsible for three fires that broke out in rapid succession in the Oaklands area late Tuesday causing $4,500 damage and sending one man to hospital.

A spokesman for the Victoria fire department said the fires were reported over a half-hour period beginning at 11:24 p.m. when a passer-by spotted smoke coming from a car parked in front of a house at 1521 Pearl.

A minute later firemen received a report of a fire against a wall of the Oaklands elementary school annex building and at 11:54 p.m. they were called to a fire in the rear porch of a house at 2659 Victor.

Fire officials estimated about $4,000 damage to the house, $500 to the car and none to the school.

Howard Smith, occupant of the house, cut his finger while fighting the blaze and was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was treated and released.

In an unrelated fire tenants of the Ritz Hotel, 710 Fort, were forced to evacuate after a smoke detector activated an alarm at 3:45 a.m.

The smoke came from a third floor bathroom where firemen found a towel had been set on fire.

Police Get Authority To Kill Vicious Dogs

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has acceded to several requests and given municipal police forces the authority to destroy marauding dogs.

A cabinet order-in-council has proclaimed two sections of the Domestic Animal Protection Act returning the authority to deal with vicious dogs to municipalities.

One of the sections allows a provincial court judge to order a dog killed if the judge is satisfied the animal has killed or is likely to kill or injure a person or domestic animal.

Al Pelter, head of the provincial livestock branch, said in an interview municipalities used to have such authority under the Animal Act but the pertinent sections were repealed when the Domestic Animal Protection Act became law in 1973.

He said Vancouver was the first to notice the loss of authority and made provision to have it restored. Since that time other municipalities including Saanich and Mission, have requested the authority be given back.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said Tuesday the changes are welcome although they are not necessary as they were in 1975 when there was more of a problem controlling dogs.

He said he has not yet seen the sections of the act which have been proclaimed.

However, he added, police need some power to be able to deal effectively with vicious or marauding dogs. Prior to the proclamations, such dogs could only be impounded and police had no power to pick-up dogs or destroy them.

Section six of the Act, now states that "where a person finds a dog running at large and attacking or viciously pursuing a person or domestic animal, he may kill the dog."

The other section gives provincial judges the power to order a dog killed. Authority is also given peace officers, who are convinced the situation is urgent and have obtained the consent of the local police commissioner.

UVIC MAN NAMED JAIL DIRECTOR

Bill Pogson, a University of Victoria lecturer, has been appointed director of the Lakeview Camp, the new juvenile containment centre being developed near Campbell River.

Pogson, a lecturer in the Child Care Facility, has been involved in corrections since 1967, working in institutions at Haney, Alouette Lake and the Metchosin farm camp.

Lakeview Camp is one of four centres being developed in the province for juvenile offenders in jail-like settings. The camp opens Jan. 1, and will have a capacity of 20 juveniles.

Dewey Appointed Dean

The University of Victoria board of governors has appointed Dr. John Dewey, 47, to a five-year term as Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies.

Dewey, a professor in the Physics Department, was formerly Dean of Academic Affairs, an office abolished June 30.

He succeeds Dr. S. A. Jennings, 62, whose term as Dean of Graduate Studies has expired.

Dewey has been at UVic since 1965 and is an internationally-known expert on explosions and their effects.

The board of governors also named Dr. Izzud-Din Pal as acting Dean of Arts and Science, UVic's largest faculty.

Pal is an associate professor in the Department of Economics. He replaces Dr. Alfred Fischer who is taking a year's study leave.

Professor Murray Fraser, Dean of UVic's two-year-old Faculty of Law, has been named chairman of the Committee of Canadian Law Deans for 1977-78.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch, who is chairman of the Council of Western Canadian University Presidents, has just been elected to the board of the Association of Universitits and Colleges of Canada, which is the mother organization of all professional university groups.

For the past two years, Dr. Peter Smith, Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts, has been chairman of the Canadian Association of Fine Arts Deans.

Dr. Norma Mickelson, Dean of the Faculty of Education, has just stepped down from a one-year term as chairman of the Canadian Association of Deans of Education.

Dr. G. Neil Perry, who retired June 30 as director of UVic's School of Public Administration, has been this past year president of the Insititute of Public Administration of Canada.

Early Sign-Up At University

The pre-registration program that saved students long line-ups at the University of Victoria last September is in effect again this year.

Starting today, students can register for their winter courses in room 207 of the Clearihue building from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The program continues to Aug. 12.

When the early registration was initiated last year, some skeptics on campus said that few students would bother with it.

However, 3,600 students — more than 50 per cent — took advantage of summer registration.

Administrative Registrar Gordon Smiley said they were mainly the senior students who had experienced the long September line-ups in the past.

Pre-registration could involve some 75 per cent of the students in the future, he said.

Meanwhile, Smiley won't speculate on the total enrolment at UVic in the fall.

There are 700 first-year students who have been conditionally accepted by UVic.

There are also 6,000 last year students who are eligible to re-register this year, he said.

International Body to Sponsor Tall Ships' Race

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The British-based International Sail Training Association has agreed to sponsor a race of the world's tall ships from Honolulu to Victoria in 1978, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Tuesday.

The ships are expected to reach the Inner Harbor around July 15.

The tall ships' race is one of several marine events being arranged to mark the bicentennial of Capt. James Cook's landing at Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound.

International naval reviews in Victoria and Vancouver and an extensive marine archeology expedition are also planned.

Bawlf said it will probably be September or October before it is known which ships will come here.

He said European vessels will be attending a convention in the Baltic at that time so he is anticipating entries from South America, Japan, the United States, Australia, New Zealand and Asia.

"We're reasonably confident we'll get the Eagle (a United States coast Guard ship) which I think is 340 feet long," Bawlf said.

He said negotiations with the international association have been arranged through Barclay Warburton, of the American Sail Training Association, based at Rhode Island.

In preparation for the tall ships event, Bawlf has been negotiating with the federal government and reports Justic Minister Ron Basford, is "very interested".

Bawlf has asked for federal assistance in dredging the Inner Harbor in the area where the old Canadian Pacific wharf was situated, in extending the Black Ball jetty out into the harbor and creating a small boat basin.

Bawlf hopes to have six to eight of the larger square-riggers and a variety of smaller schooner-type ships come to Victoria.

"The objective is to have as many as possible in the Inner Harbor. We want a visual record of the event . . . a record of tall ships against the background of The Empress and the legislative Buildings," he said, addding any overflow will be docked at Ogden Point.

Bawlf said an international naval review is planned for the time the tall ships will be here and in Vancouver and he is relying on Canadian naval assistance to contact other countries with tall ships. He hopes the navy will organize the marshalling of the tall ships and assist with spectator vessels.

He said the tall ships are expected to be here and in Vancouver for two weeks before racing from Victoria down the coast to San Francisco.

"There will be a sailpast in both Victoria and Vancouver as well as onshore events," Bawlf said.

The events would include whaler racing, conventional sports and Bawlf is hoping Greater Victoria's ethnic groups will act as hosts to visiting crews.

The minister said he has approached Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand, for help in launching a marine archeology expedition on Vancouver Island.

"We want to organize a fairly extensive expedition. This was the outpost of the empire. People travelled 16,000 miles to Victoria," Bawlf said.

In addition to exploring Friendly Cove, Bawlf said he hopes the expedition would seek for relics of the Tonquin, sent out by Jacob Astor to establish a settlement in Astoria, Ore. The ship was lost off the west coast of Vancouver Island in 1811 after her crew was massacred by Indians.

Another ship, the Boston, suffered a similar fate in 1801.

Bawlf also hopes explorations will be carried out at Long Beach in search of a Spanish galleon that was lost there around 1790.

The minister said Tofino residents report part of the galleon was found buried in the sand in the 1920s.

He admits there is much to be done before any of these plans come to fruition but adds:

"Nothing ventured, nothing gained . . . and I'm always a positive thinker."

Moore Leads by Six; Tops Trials for Team

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Gail Harvey Moore of the Vancouver Golf Club and Marilyn Palmer of Marine Drive, Vancouver, were the only two golfers to break 80 in the second 18-holes of the 36-hole qualifying round of the B.C. women's amateur golf championship at Uplands Golf Club, Tuesday, and that's the way they finiished in the medal test.

Moore, who had shot a record one-under par 73 on Monday, soared to a 79 Tuesday for a 36-hole total of 152, while Palmer, the defending-champion, had the lowest round of the day, a 78, which added to her 80 on Monday, gave her 158, six strokes back.

While Moore was taking medallist honors and leading the selection test to the provincial team for the nationals tournament, Victoria city champion and four-time B.C. champion, Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale, just missed earning a place on the team.

DeGirolamo, who had a 77 Monday, shot an 82 on Tuesday and it was one stroke too many to get her into a playoff with Valerie White of Vancouver Marine Drive for the fourth and final berth. An 80 would have given DeGirolamo the place.

White, who also finished with an 82 Tuesday after her first round 81, had a selection score of plus 18, one better than DeGirolamo.

Under the selection format, golfers had six rounds from which to pick their best four scores, but DeGirolamo, because of illness and other reasons, was unable to compete in two of the eligible competitions and had no throwaway scores. White did not have to count her 82 Tuesday having scored better earlier.

Other members of the team are Palmer and Paula Phillips, also of Marine Drive. Phillips had an 80 Tuesday to go with an opening round 87 for a 167 total. DeGirolamo is the team alternate. The Canadian championship will take place in Quebec, Aug. 14-20.

Joan Lawson of Uplands was fourth in the medal round with 79-81—160. Other Island qualifiers were Pat Derry of Royal Colwood, 80-83—163; Jean Hopps of Uplands 85-83—168; and Jean Kerrone of Duncan, 83-85—168. The remainder are from the mainland.

It took a score of 170 to qualify for the championship flight of 16 plus a playoff between Lorraine Mackenzie of Marine Drive and Mary Stimpson of Capilano for the final spot. Mackenzie won the three-hole playoff, starting on 10, with a birdie on the 12th.

That earned Mackenzie the right to meet Moore in one of today's eight matches in the first round of match play.

One Islander was certain to fall as DeGirolamo was paired against Hopps. Lawson was against Phillips and Kerrone drew the 1976 champion, Palmer.

Two rounds of match play will take place Thursday with the finals over 36 holes on Friday.

Lawson, with her two rounds of 79 and 81 now is second in the battle for places on the B.C. seniors women's team to play in the seniors championship at Winnipeg, Aug. 29-31.

Jean Stewart of Quilchena Golf Club, Vancouver, leads with Colleen McCulloch of Point Grey third. Anna May Taylor of Seymour is next.

There are only three places open on the senior team as defending Canadian senior champion, Margaret Todd of Victoria, is automatically a member of the team.

Todd, who injured her wrist in an accident at home on the weekend, was forced to withdraw from the B.C. tournament Tuesday.

The senior team will be determined following the final two rounds of medal play at the B.C. Seniors Championship at the Vancouver Golf Club, July 27-28.

ONTARIO, ALBERTA IN FINAL

Ontario and Alberta remained unbeaten and advanced to today's final in the Canadian under-17 cricket championship with victories Tuesday afternoon.

At Beacon Hill Park, Ontario declared at 219 for nine wickets and then dismissed British Columbia for 78, all out. Alberta dismissed Western Provinces for 22 runs and then scored 34 without the loss of a wicket at St. Michael's University School.

Dave Nanabidewa led Ontario with 49 runs and Mamhee[illegible] added 49 while Dave Proctor led B.C. bowlers by toppling four wickets for the loss of 21 runs. Zahir Karim set the pace for B.C. batsmen with 19 while Ontario's Pat Clarke took three for 15.

Duncan Mills and Martin Fielder led Alberta bowling, downing four for 19 and three for 10, respectively. Sam Naicken (20, not out) and Farid Remtulla (14, not out) were the only Alberta batsmen needed.

On Thursday the tournament winds up with two all-star matches after which the Canadian under-17 side for international play will be selected.

Macs Locked in Third Spot

Victoria McDonalds' final placing for the 1977 Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League seasons may have been determined Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

New Westminster Salmonbellies were the authors of a 13-9 victory over McDonalds and the result leaves the Macs locked in third place, 10 points behind the second-place 'Bellies and 10 in front of Coquitlam J-Hawks and Richmond Roadrunners.

The teams tangle again only three times and if McDonalds hope to escape meeting the powerful and still undefeated Burnaby Cablevision squad in the first round of the playoffs, they'll need help from the trailing clubs.

Ivan Tuura scored five goals for the Salmonbellies and set up two others. Gary Lindsay, Al Hughes and Ken Brown each scored two goals. Rod Sepka and Jack Fulton had singles.

Kevin Kennedy and a returnee from last season, John Entzminger, each scored two goals for McDonalds. Steve Buckley, Shane Sanderson, Paul Michael, Terry Jay and Jeff Whitney-Griffiths had singles.

The second period was marred by a brawl with Jamie Robertson of McDonalds and Bob Zanusso and Dan Richardson of Salmonbellies drawing game misconducts and being ejected from the game.

Robertson and Zanuso had agreed to disagree when Richardson left the penalty box to assist his teammate.

New Westminster drew 62 penalty minutes and McDonalds 56.

Goalkeeper Mike Duch of McDonalds stopped 38 shots while Jim Greenwell of Salmonbellies stopped 31.

Whitecaps Edge Rivals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Derek Possee scored with less than 14 minutes remaining to give Vancouver Whitecaps a 1-0 North American Soccer League victory over division rival Seattle Sounders before 14,559 fans Tuesday night.

Midfielder Tommy Ord slipped the ball through to Possee, who eluded the tackle of Dave Gillett at 15 yards and fired it low past sprawling Seattle goalie Tony Chursky.

It was the sixth goal for Possee since he joined the Whitecaps eight games ago.

Ord was the most dangerous player for the Whitecaps as he had six of Vancouver's 15 shots on goal.

The first half was loosely played as neither team could connect with passes. Seattle managed only two shots on goal in that half and both were ineffective tries from the wings.

The Sounders put up a tough defense as six-footers Mike England and Gillett continuously beat the smaller Whitecap forwards to the ball.

Vancouver goalie Arnie Mauser stopped five shots in recording his sixth shutout of the season. Chursky made seven saves.

The win moved the Whitecaps' record to 10-8 and put them solidly in second place in the Western Division, 14 points ahead of third-place Portland and 18 ahead of Seattle. They trail division leaders Minnesota Kicks by 14 points.

Netherlands Tie Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The Dutch national field hockey team and Canada's national squad played to a 2-2 tie Tuesday in the second test match on the team's 11-game tour of North America.

The Netherlands beat Canada 3-2 in the first test match on Sunday. The third test match in the series, which counts towards international rankings, will be played in Vancouver on Sunday.

Keis Kruize and Tom Van t'Hek scored the Dutch goals while Doug Bready and Brian Chorhan, both of Vancouver, replied for Canada.

EXPULSION INVALID

LONDON (Reuter) — The explusion of Taiwan from the International Badminton Federation (IBF) was ruled invalid by a British High Court judge Tuesday.

The British-based IBF was ordered by Mr. Justice Robert Goff not to implement the expulsion decison taken at the IBF annual meeting in Malmoe, Sweden, in May.

The judge ruled that the expulsion was not valid because it had not received the required three-quarters majority of votes at the Malmoe meeting.

Riders No Champs In Exhibition Play

By The Canadian Press

You would never know from the pre-season results that Saskatchewan Roughriders were Grey Cup finalists last year.

Six interceptions proved to be Saskatchewan's downfall Tuesday night as the defending Western Conference champions dropped a 38-20 decision to Edmonton Eskimos for their fourth consecutive loss in Canadian Football League exhibition play.

The Eskimos converted four of the interceptions into touchdowns to complete their exhibition play with a 2-2 record.

Meanwhile, Winnipeg Blue Bombers continued their winning form, completing a perfect exhibition season with a 28-11 victory over Calgary Stampeders who finished with a 2-2 mark.

In the only other game Tuesday, Montreal Alouettes held on to beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 27-19 in the lone Eastern Conference contest. The result left both clubs with a 2-2 pre-season record.

Saskatchewan led throughout the first three quarters, but three of the interceptions in the final quarter led to touchdowns by Larry Washington, Jim Germany, and Larry Highbaugh.

Highbaugh also saw duty on offence and scored another touchdown on a 45-yard pass from quarterback Tom Wilkinson. The other Eskimo touchdown was scored by Wayne Johnson. Dave Cutler rounded out Edmonton's scoring, converting all five touchdowns, kicking a single and adding a 29-yard field goal.

Saskatchewan's touchdowns were scored by Molly McGee on a two-yard run and by Tom Campana on a seven-yard pass from veteran quarterback Ron Lancaster. Bob Macoritti added field goals of 28 and 42 yards and converted both touchdowns.

Bernie Ruoff, the leading scorer in the WFC last season, led the Winnipeg scoring with 16 points. He kicked field goals from 45, 10, 42 and 28 yards, added singles of 47, 46 and 65 yards, and kicked one convert.

Ruoff's toe had put the Bombers in command before they finally managed to score the game's first touchdown with 15 seconds left in the second quarter, as Jay Washington ran over from the three-yard line to cap a quick 59-yard march.

Punt returner Dickie Harris dashed for a 76-yard touchdown with seven seconds remaining in the third quarter to lead Montreal to its win.

U.K.'s Martin Foster Leads Open by Stroke

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Martin Foster, a club pro from Britain, broke par on both nines and shot a three-under-par 67 today for the lead midway through the first round of the British Open golf tournament.

While the gallery's eyes were firmly fixed on Americans Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, Foster fired a 34-33. Only once was Foster over par, on the eighth when he took a five. He had four birdies.

Tied at 68 were Nicklaus, bidding for his third title in this tournament, Watson and Lee Trevino, a two-time British Open winner.

Trevino eagle the 500-yard, par-five 17th — the most generous hole on the Ailsa course — and finished the back nine with a 33. He was even par over the front nine.

Micklaus birdied the last two holes for a 31 on the back nine after shooting two-over 37 going out. Nicklaus birdied the 18th with a 25-foot putt.

Watson blew a chance for a tie with Foster when he bogeyed the 18th.

Watson came off the 17th with a birdie and was three under, but he pulled his drive off the 18th tee into the stands. He got a free drop, but the drive appeared to have unsettled him. He missed an eight-foot putt for par that would have kept him ahead of Nicklaus, who won the British Open in 1966 and 1970.

Watson two rounds of 34.

Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, who led the first three rounds of last year's British Open, was at one-under 69, shooting 36 and 33 in unusually warm weather that reached over 25 degrees. Ballesteros birdied the 16th and 17th holes.

Former United States Open winner Hale Irwin and young George Burns were at even-par 70. Irwin shot a 32 on the back nine — including a bogey on 18 — after going three-over 38 on the first nine. Burns had a steady 36-34 over the 6,875-yard, par-70 layout overlooking the Irish Sea.

PULFORD TO CHICAGO?

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Star says Bob Pulford will be the new general manager-coach of Chicago Black Hawks, Bobby Orr will step into the administrative end of the operations and Tommy Ivan, Hawks' GM since 1954, will become a vice-president of the National Hockey League club.

Sports editor Jim Proudfoot, in Tuesday's edition of The Star, says the new setup will be announced at a news conference in Chicago on Wednesday.

Pulford, former star with Toronto Maple Leafs who quit recently in Los Angeles after five successful seasons coaching the Kings, has been rumored headed for Chicago.

Orr's future as the game's outstanding player has been jeopardized by recurring knee injuries. The latest on his left knee — the sixth — is said to hold little hope for his return to the game this season, if ever.

Ivan's future as GM of the Hawks has been tenuous in recent years as the club continued to spiral out of contention. Long-time friend and Chicago coach Billy Reay was sacked last season in what was seen as the start of a complete housecleaning by owner Bill Wirtz.

Proudfoot says the only remaining question concerns the fate of Bill White, veteran defensive standout who stepped into Reay's job midway in the season. White apparently will be offered the coaching job at Dallas of the Central League, left vacant when Roger Neilson took the Leaf coaching job.

Chicago had its worst season in two decades during 1976-77. Attendance fell off alarmingly over the last two years. They finished 12th over all in the combined NHL standings and the Hawks were swept out in the first round.

Rocks Host Salmonbellies; Burrards Get by Adanacs

With the exception of Chris Hall, who is suffering from influenza, Victoria Shamrocks should be at full strength for their Western Lacrosse Association game with New Westminster Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena tonight at 8

Ron MacNeil, who missed the last game here because of work commitments, will return to action and should not miss any more games because of work.

Shamrock coach Nirmal Dillon, who is also down with the flu, said that veteran Joe McCrea who played with the Shamrocks last season and recently was transferred to Vancouver by his firm, will be arriving in Vancouver, today, and will likely see some action with the Rocks at Nanaimo, Saturday night.

McCrea scored 25 goals and had 27 assists for 52 points for the Shamrocks last season.

Shamrocks currently trail Vancouver Burrards by seven points and have two games in hand.

They have beaten the Salmonbellies in all three games between the clubs this season, twice in New Westminster and once here.

In addition to the three games remaining with New Westminster, the Shamrocks have three games left with Burrards with two of them at Memorial Arena and Dillon feels they have an excellent chance of overtaking the league-leaders.

The other remaining games for the Shamrocks are at Nanaimo, this Saturday, and on the final date of the regular season, July 30.

Vancouver Burrards ended a three-game losing streak on Tuesday night with a 13-12 victory over Coquitlam Adanacs at Kerrisdale Arena.

Ron Pinder scored the winning goal with two minutes left to play. It was Pinder's 15th goal of the season and his third of the game.

Doug Hayes scored five goals for the winners and Dave Tasker had two. Kevin Parsons and Mark Valastin each scored four goals for Coquitlam.

Brian Evans of Nanaimo still leads the WLA scoring race with 38 goals and 63 assists for 101 points. Jim Lynch of the Timberman is second at 36-37-73 and rookie Kevin Alexander third at 35-38—73.

Leading Shamrock scorer is Ivan Thompson with 21 goals and 33 assists for 54 points. Charn Dhillon is next with 18 goals and 33 assists for 51 points while MacNeil has 21 goals and 25 assists for 46 points.

Larry Smeltzer of the Irish has moved into the lead in the goalkeepers' race with a goals-against average of 9.05 in nine games.

Dave Evans of Burrards, the former leader, is second at 10.52 while the Shamrocks have the best team average, 11.21.

QUAX SETS 5,000 RECORD

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Dick Quax of New Zealand broke the world record for 5000 metres Tuesday with a time of 13 minutes, 12.86 seconds.

That electrical clocking will go into the record books as 13:12.9, one-tenth of a second faster than the world record of 13:13.0, set five years ago by Emil Puttemans of Belgium.

It was a sweet victory for Quax, a 29-year-old New Zealander who missed Puttemans's mark by only one-tenth of a second at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium last year.

Quax, Olympic silver medallist at 5,000 metres, last week ran the distance in 13:19.4 at the World Games in Helsinki.

"I'm glad I got it this year," Quax said of his record-shattering effort, which came at an international meet. "I really wanted to go for the record again here."

Quax's record was the third track and field world standard to be set in five days.

Last Thursday, Kenya's Samson Kimombwa beat the 10,000-metre world mark in Helskinki, also by one-tenth of a second. On Sunday, 18-year-old Russian Vladimir Yashenko broke the high jump record by clearing 7 feet 7¾ inches.

Earlier in the Tuesday meet, Debbie Brill of Aldergrove won the women's high jump with a leap of 1.84 metres. Joni Huntley of the United States wound up second with a jump of 1.80 metres, and Anette Taannander of Sweden was third at the same height but more misses.

Greg Joy of Vancouver was third in the men's high jump with a height of 2.21 metres. Dwight Stones of the U.S. was first with a leap of 2.28 metres followed by countryman Rory Kotinek at 2.24.

Penny Werthner of Ottawa was third in the women's 1500 metres in 4:18.2. Francie Larrieu-Lutz of the U.S. was first in 4:10.4 followed by Bronislawa Ludwichowska of Poland in 4:14.5.

Castlegar Contestant Only One to Break Par

WEST VANCOUVER — Out-of-town players — including two from Vancouver Island — led the way Thursday following the opening round of the 72-hole British Columbia junior men's golf championship at Capilano Golf and Country Club.

Heavy rains durng the early morning left the 6,644-yard course with many soft spots and only Ron Sherstobitoff of Castlegar was able to break par with a one-under 71. The 18-year-old had two birdies and one eagle in the round.

Tied for second, one stroke behind Sherstobitoff, were Stu Holroyd of Victoria's Gorge Vale and Stu Winchester of Comox.

The favorites — Victoria junior champion Jim Rutledge of Uplands and Brian Eccleston of North Vancouver — had their troubles, Rutledge, fresh from a strong performance in the Cowichan Open, had a 77 and Eccleston, a member of the Hamber Cup B.C. amateur club championship team, had a 78.

Jeff Wylie of Nanaimo, rated another contender, struggled to a 78, including a 10 on one hole.

Brian Rands of Uplands and Brian DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale were in a six-way tie for eighth spot at 75 while Lanny Sawchuck of Uplands fired a 76.

The field will be trimmed to the top 100 and ties following today's round and the field will be further reduced to the top 50 and ties Thursday after 54 holes.

Invitations to play in the B.C. Golf Association invitational at Shaughnessy on July 16 and Marine Drive on July 17 will be extended to the top 20 finishers and ties in the provincial tournament. The four rounds of the B.C. tourney and the two rounds of the invitational will be used to select a B.C. team to play in the junior interprovincial matches Aug. 24-27 at Prince Albert, Sask.

In the Avery Cup junior team championship, held over the first 36 holes of the junior tourney, Vancouver Fraserview has the lead with a four-man total of 307. Uplands, represented by Rands, Sawchuck, Rutledge and Bill Chapman (84), is second with 312 while Vancouver Golf Club occupies third spot at 314.

CRASH KILLS DRAG RACER

MILAN, Mich. (AP) — Professional drag racer Don Carlton was killed Tuesday when he lost control of a car he was testing for Chrysler Corp., a company spokesman said.

Carlton, 36, apparently lost control of the car at the end of the quarter-mile test track and the car flipped over a number of times before coming to rest, officials said.

Carlton was driving an altered 1977 Dodge Colt at the Milan dragway, which the company had rented for the tests.

Ferguson To Quit Coaching?

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Phil Esposito says he expects Jean-Guy Talbot to take over dutes as coach of the New York Rangers this fall, a function filled recently by general manager John Ferguson.

"From what I understand, Talbot is going to coach the team this year and Fergy is going to remain in the background and just be the general manager. I don't understand how a guy could do the two jobs. It's really tough."

Ferguson has been handling both jobs for some time, although assistant coach Talbot has run the bench by himself several times while Ferguson watched from the Madison Square Gardens press box.

Forest Industry Brief Opposes Better Fish Law

Whoever prepared a recent brief by the council of forest industries to the federal standing committee on fisheries and forestry over Bill C-38, an amendment to upgrade the Fisheries Act, appears to ignore one basic fact.

Namely, the amendments are being proposed to close loopholes in current laws which are being exploited by industrial concerns.

As may be expected, the industry brief calls for downgrading of the existing act.

"The process of pollution regulation is one of co-operation and negotiation, of compromise and trade-offs, and of recognition of economic and environmental realities," states the brief.

I suspect their vision of "realities" differs greatly from those of both environmentalists and professionals concerned with the long-term consequences of uncontrolled industrial development.

They do make one fairly good point. The amendments do duplicate some current provincial legislation.

But since a recent court ruling found that provincial authorities have no jurisdiction over waters under federal control, why not do away with the ineffective portions of the provincial regulations?

Another part of the brief states that industry in the province has spent nearly $94 million from 1972 to 1976 on air and water improvements and plan to spend about $151 million over the next five-year period for environmental problems.

That's laudable, certainly. But, would they have made that investment if public pressure hadn't forced their hand?

"For woodlands operations the present Fisheries Act provides more than ample power to the Department of Environment to protect the fisheries resource," says the brief.

Unfortunately, this statement doesn't jive with several court decisions reached over infractions under the current act. Because of certain inadequacies, some violators have got off scott free or with token slaps on the wrist.

Another point to remember in this whole question of duplication of effort is that current provincial anti-pollution regulations very often aren't enforced stringently enough — particularly if the violator happens to be another department within the provincial government.

Also, there's the thought that pollution and other questions of an environmental nature know no boundaries. Perhaps the power to deal with these problems would be best vested with the federal government, which can deal more effectively with international and interprovincial matters.

Enough public concern must have been registered with the federal government, however, since C-38 has passed its third reading in the Commons and now faces a further three readings in the Senate before becoming law.

So, from now on, any letters of support for the bill will have to go to that body, which still has the power to amend — for better or worse — the original document.

NIBBLES: Now that the official "approved" regulations governing the limited entry hunting season for Roosevelt elk on Vancouver Island are now out, I notice several revisions have been made . . . The season for cow elk (20 permits) has been extended one week to Dec. 3-18 . . . Bulls (75 permits) are in season Oct. 8-30 — just like this writer said May 11 . . . However, the deadlines for submitting applications for the permits and the public draw date have been rightly postponed to July 22 and 25, respectively . . . Forms to apply for a permit and additional information may be obtained from any government agent or fish and wildlife branch office . . . Anyone wishing information on other limited entry seasons within the province is requested to telephone 387-5910.

News of a more sombre sort . . . The Environment and Land Use Committee of the provincial government can be expected to announce approval of an application by Island Shake and Shingle to build a mill on the Cowichan Bay estuary . . . This move apparently goes against the recommendations of both Environment Minister Jim Nielsen and the Secretariat . . . In this day and age of enlightenment, approval of industrial growth on any of our valuable estuary areas is nothing short of criminal.

Yanks Tread on Tribe; Bosox Tumble to Third

By The Associated Press

"We are just as good as them," Cleveland's Rico Carty said, referring to New York Yankees. However, there are those who would disagree.

The Yankees edged the Indians 5-4 Tuesday night for their fifth consecutive victory over Cleveland this season and their 12th win against the Indians over two seasons. The triumph kept the first-place Yankees one game ahead in the American League's East Division.

"It's luck," said the Indians' Bill Melton of the streak. "I think baseball can be 80-percent luck and the rest skill.

"Cleveland had beaten California 13 straight and I broke that spell with a home run," the former Angel added. "Frank Robinson jumped up and hit his head on the roof of the dugout."

Cleveland outfielder John Lowenstein also thinks luck has played a great part in the streak.

"I should have been safe at third on a play tonight, but Fred Stanley made a perfect play," said Lowenstein. "They always seem to be lucky against us; make the right play against us. And Jackson wins the game hitting a pitch he has no business hitting."

Reggie Jackson doubled home the winning run in the seventh inning. It was the second double of the night for Jackson and his 25th of the season, tops in the AL.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles swept a doubleheader from Detroit Tigers, 2-1 and 6-5 in 12 innings, Kansas City Royals topped Texas Rangers 6-4, Minnesota Twins nipped Milwaukee Brewers 3-2, California Angels blanked Oakland A's 6-0 and Chicago White Sox defeated Seattle Mariners 4-1.

Baltimore moved into second place, one-half game ahead of idle Boston Red Sox in the AL East, with its sweep of Detroit. Jim Palmer tossed a seven-hitter in the opener and the winning run scored in the seventh when Tito Fuentes's relay on a potential inning-ending double play bounced off the helmet of a sliding Doug DeCinces at second base.

The Orioles took the nightcap on Ken Singleton's RBI single in the 12th after Doug DeCinces had tied the score at 5-5 with a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth. Lee May erased a 4-0 deficit in the sixth with his ninth career grand slam.

Frank White, Hal McRae and Al Cowens belted home runs off Bert Blyleven, ruining the Texas pitcher's first start in two weeks. Blyleven, 6-9, had been sidelined by a groin injury.

Wayne Simpson and Dyar Miller combined on a three-hitter for California to end Vida Blue's 12-game winning streak at Anaheim Stadium.

with a 5-4 decision over Victoria Firefighters Senior Babe Ruth League All-Stars in an interlocking game Tuesday night at Lambrick Park.

Three consecutive bases-on-balls, followed by a three-run double by Russ Holmes, got Gorge off to a fast start in the first inning.

Gorge scored what proved to be the winning run in the fifth inning when Mark Lawless drew another walk, advanced to third on two throwing errors and scored on a double steal.

Rick Cook earned the pitching win by striking out nine batters and yielding six hits.

Lakehill Gains Final

Lakehill nudged National 15-14 Tuesday to gain a berth in the final of the Little League city baseball championship tournament at Lampson Street Park.

The tying and winning runs came in the bottom of the sixth inning when Lakehill scored on two bases on balls and two throwing errors.

Bill Haddon led Lakehill batters with a two-run homer in the fourth frame and Gary Leibel pitched a six-hitter to record the win.

Gordon Head meets Hampton tonight at 6:30 with the winner advancing to face Lakehill in the final at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Two-Hour Day Forced On Road Crews—Fraser

Highways Minister Alex Fraser says highway maintenance crews are goofing off too much.

Fraser said Tuesday that maintenance crews, the workers who run grading equipment in summer and clear snow in winter, are not efficient enough.

The maintenance grader and snowplow operators "average two hours a day" at work on highways, Fraser told the legislature.

He said $80,000 machines stand idle the rest of the day and operators are paid for the full time.

"Naturally I'm concerned because we continue to get complaints about the standards of maintenance. This is the biggest problem we have at the present time."

The problem, he said during debate on his budgetary estimates, is the union agreement which pays an operator from the time he leaves home to the time he arrives at work. The worker is also paid from the time he leaves work until he reaches home.

"I want to emphasize that the men are doing nothing wrong at all," Fraser said. "They're working within the union agreement that specifically gives them portal-to-portal pay.

"We have grader operators who might be 50 miles from home when they stop work at night. They go back home and the next day drive back to work and work until approximately the time to turn around and go back.

"That's why we have two hours a day coming out of an $80,000 machine."

He also said the provincial government has set up a committee to study the highways department's ferry system.

"Again I have not been too satisfied with what I've seen in the ferry system," Fraser said in announcing that the study will be conducted by former highways deputy minister Tom Miard.

Also on the committee are Kirby Woodhead, of Texada Island and Harry Huck, of Cortes Island.

"They have a long list of guidelines of what we want them to look into," Fraser said. "It is correct that we have ferries that we charge for and ferries that are free, and I want to have their opinion before we make anymoves."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two brothers were charged Tuesday in provincial court with assault causing bodily harm in connection with an incident earlier in the morning at an Esquimalt cabaret.

Jointly charged were 28-year-old Ronald George McWilliams and 23-year-old James Brian McWilliams, both of 1265 Grant, in connection with an incident shortly after midnight at the Bacchanalia Cabaret, 905 Esquimalt Road.

Esquimalt police said a man was attacked with a broken beer glass and was punched and kicked.

The older McWilliams is also charged separately with the same charge in connection with an incident about two hours earlier in the Colony Motor Inn beer parlor in Victoria. A man was also cut with a beer glass there in an altercation at a pool table.

McWilliams, who elected trial by judge and jury, was denied bail by Judge Fred Green.

James Brian McWilliams requested bail be dealt with this afternoon when his lawyer will be present.

Also charged with assault causing bodily harm was Barbara Wendy Reynolds, 23, of 831 Ellery.

She was charged in connection with a Monday incident involving a knife and a taxi driver.

Green released her on her own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 but said she must report daily to the bail supervisor and not have any weapon in her possession. She was remanded until next Tuesday for election.

An 18-year-old charged with the June 14 holdup of the Bank of Nova Scotia at 3605 Shelbourne elected trail by judge and jury and was remanded until Friday to fix a date for his preliminary hearing.

Hugh Seymour Archbold, who gave police an address of 1442 Wende in Saanich, is charged with robbery with threats of violence in the holdup which netted $1,905.

He was also charged Tuesday with possession of a controlled drug for the purpose of trafficking and elected trial by judge alone on that charge. He will also have that preliminary hearing date set Friday.

Green levied fines totalling $500 on 20-year-old Peter Anthony Kiernan, 2620 Dean, who pleaded guilty to driving without insurance and dangerous driving.

Court was told Victoria city police spotted Kernan at Cook and Johnson on June 2 letting off a passenger who did not have a helmet on while riding Kiernan's motorcycle. Police then saw Kiernan speed away against a red light and reach 90 before police lost him. They later found him walking near the area, court was informed.

Green fined Kiernan $250 on each charge despite hearing an explanation that he was a motorcycle racer and had more control of his machine than the average person.

Motorcyclist Killed in Crash

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Ian Carrol, 16, of Campbell River, died Monday following a collision between a motorcycle and a truck in this community.

Carrol's motorcycle passenger, James MacMillan, 16, is in satisfactory condition in hospital.

UMBRA COMING

From Parksville, a Vancouver Island centre that has always been keenly aware of live theatre, a young but keen and exploratory company, the Umbra Theatre Society, brings its second production on tour to Victoria this week.

The piece is Fando and Lis by the Spanish playwright, Fernando Arrabel. It will be seen at the James Bay Community Centre, 316 Niagara at 8 p.m. Thursday. Tickets will be available at the door.

Fando and Lis are young lovers on a strange journey to Tar, a city both magical and elusive where, it is said, everybody attempts to arrive ultimately. They meet three philosophers on the road and Fando seeks to bridge their two worlds but only heightens the conflict between them.

Members of the company who will be seen in this searching play which will be taken to Vancouver and other Island centres, are Rick Therrien, Fran Adamson, Bruce Childs, John Tutlis and David Chantler.

'Beautiful Flowers' Turned Out a Bust

GREENBURGH, N.Y. — Neighborhood kids gave a 69-year-old woman 15 plants several weeks ago, telling her they would grow "beautiful flowers."

The flowers never came, but police say the fruit of the woman's labor was a thriving marijuana garden, with the plants two feet high.

"She had no idea they were marijuana plants," Lieut. Michael Gangemi said Friday. "She planted them right in front of her house. She thought they were really pretty."

The police removed the crop.

OMAHA, Neb. — It was his 26th wedding anniversary, so Nick Hansen decided to surprise his wife with a dozen roses. She was more surprised by the card that came with them.

Hansen ordered the flowers sent to his wife's office and dictated a message for the card: "Thank you for being you and for sharing it with me."

But the card that reached Mrs. Hansen said: "Thank you for being you and sharing Ed with me."

Mrs. Hansen promptly called her husband to thank him for the roses and to find out who Ed is.

LOS ANGELES — Heiress Barbara Hutton was sued Tuesday for more than $36,000 in back wages by her former chauffeur.

Thomas Creech, owner of the Ambassador Limousine Service, said the heiress owes him $32,290 in back wages earned up to Feb. 14, when he was discharged after six years.

He also is asking $3,360 in civil penalties.

WOODY POINT, Nfld. — A bench warrant for the arrest of Brian Davies, executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare, was issued Tuesday when he failed to show up for resumption of his trail on charges of breaking Canadian seal protection regulations.

Davies is charged with flying a helicopter less than 2,000 feet above a seal and with landing a helicopter less than half a nautical mile from a seal, both forbidden by the regulations.

The warrant for his arrest was issued by Magistrate Owen Kennedy when neither Davies nor his lawyer, Leo Barry, appeared in court Tuesday.

ST. PAUL DE VENCE, France — Artist Marc Chagall, who becomes 90 on Thursday, says birthdays bring no final revelations and no relief from the doubts of a lifetime.

"I doubt myself, I doubt myself all the time," says the man whose paintings featured fiddlers on roofs, goats floating over barnyards and lovers riding a blue horse beyond the sun.

For all his years and reputation as one of the world's greatest living artists, Chagall has never been able to overcome doubts about his ability.

TAIPEI — A physician's wife walked out on her husband and is preparing to divorce him because he loves skulls more than her, the China Times reported today.

It said the wife, identified only as Mrs. Chiu, complained that her husband spent most of his free time studying and preserving more than ten skulls he has collected at home.

She left him last Monday because he inadvertently placed a skull next to her pillow when she was asleep.

Last Czar Died in Vancouver?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sandra Romanov of Vancouver says her recently-deceased husband was the son of Nicholas II, last czar of Russia, who with his family was supposedly killed by Soviet revolutionaries in 1918.

Mrs. Romanov placed a notice in the July 2 edition of a city newspaper recording the death of His Imperial Highness Alexei Nicolaievich, Sovereign Heir, Tsarevich, Grand Duke of Russia. This was the name of Nicholas' only son.

Historians believe that Nicholas, his wife, son and four daughters were executed in the basement of their home the night of July 17-18, 1918.

Mrs. Romanov, 37, said her husband, who died June 26 at the age of 72, had been living in Canada under an assumed name since he arrived in Canada in the early 1950's.

Mrs. Romanov, a native Canadian, said she met her husband in 1956 and married him in 1960. She said she has substantial evidence to support her claims of her husband's identity.

Her husband was 13 years old at the time of the shootings, she said, and the only survivor. She said a foster family in the Soviet Union took him in and later helped him leave Russia.

Mrs. Romanov said her husband had been offered the Russian crown in 1818 during last efforts to save the Russian monarchy. Nicholas II, however, refused to allow the boy to be crowned because he suffered from hemophilia.

Which Way's Calcutta?

LONDON (AP) — Prasanta Mukherjee set out from England on a lone voyage to Calcutta, inquired of a patrol launch for directions, headed the wrong way and finally gave up when his venerable 25-foot boat foundered 7,500 miles short of his destination.

The coast guard said Mukherjee sent a distress call Tuesday. The lone Indian mariner was plucked from his 40-year-old vessel Chinta — which means Thought — 35 miles southeast of the Isle of Wight.

Mukherjee sailed Monday from the Mamble River in southern England. The coast guard said he had loaded his battered boat — powered by a sail and an outboard motor — with quantities of curry and oatmeal, flasks of tea and sandwiches.

When he was about a mile offshore he flagged down a patrol launch and asked: "Which way is Calcutta."

The men on the launch said they tried to talk him out of making the voyage but finally told him to turn right at the Isle of Wight.

CHIVALRY STILL EXISTS AT THE FACTORY GATES

LONDON (UPI) — Just because this is the age of sex equality, chivalry need not be dead, Britain's top judge ruled Tuesday.

Lord Denning and the Court of Appeals ruled on a peculiar sex equality case involving women workers leaving a factory five minutes early.

They're allowed to do so, said officials of Automotive Products Ltd., to "avoid the risk of the women being bowled over in the rush for the factory gates."

Men working in the same factory challenged the rule, demanding extra days off to match the women's five minutes a day.

"For women to be allowed to pack up work five minutes before men is just plain discrimination," said assembly worker Barry Peake, 33.

But Lord Denning ruled, "There is clearly no discrimination in men treating women with courtesy and chivalry. This has always been a rule in our society. The elemental difference between the sexes has to be recognized, even in the interpretation of acts of parliament."

UVic Concert Has the Mood of Summer

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There is something about strings and the light-textured sounds of early instruments or the more pastoral tones of the flute, that are peculiarly suited to the mood of summer.

Tuesday, University of Victoria music department began its 10th anniversary season of summer music with just such an idyllic combination.

A chamber string ensemble with soloists Kathryn Ely, harp, Lanny Pollet, flute, and Erich Schwandt, harpsichord and organ, are offering a pair of programs consisting of music of the baroque and late baroque period, and one quite delightful piece by the 20th century American composer, Howard Hanson.

The concert will be repeated Thursday at 8 p.m. in the UVic MacLaurin Building auditorium.

Opening the program is the spirited B flat Major Concerto by Handel in which the harp as solo instrument displays its crystal-clear tones and ornamental capacity.

The concert also ends with a concerto — the J.S. Bach in A minor — for harpsichord, flute and violin soloists with strings. Both concertos were conducted by Glen Fast, but it must be said that the experienced players seemed to be in full control and to scarcely need or be aware of the conductor.

In the Handel harp concerto, the rhythmic strength and security of the ensemble was not always reflected in the soloist's performance although Ms. Ely's rendering was graceful, amply virtuosic when called upon and commanded a very fair dynamic range, all of which made the occasional moments of imprecision the more puzzling.

The Hanson Serenade for solo flute, harp and strings is an ingenious delight, full of effective harmonies and luminous treatment of the solo instruments and its performance was one of the most successful of the evening.

John Loban, concertmaster for the series, Linda Hougland Daniels as cellist and Schwandt on harpsichord, perform the Trio Sonata in B flat Major by Georg Philipp Telemann.

This high style music of the baroque demands a fine balance and blend of instruments which this particular ensemble did not supply due to a quality in the violin that was not sympathetic to the other two. There was a definite lack of warmth and sweetness in the tone — something akin to a shouting rather than a singing.

ARTIST WINS AGAIN

A well known Victoria artist who has been picking up international prizes with her prints since 1963, has done it again.

Pat Martin Bates, of 1344 Victoria, has been awarded the critic's choice prize at the 12th International Print Biennial exhibition held at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia.

The show featured more than 1,000 prints by artists from all parts of the world.

Bates, a full time teacher of printmaking and drawing at University of Victoria, said four former university graduates also exhibited at the show.

She has just returned from a European tour. Her works are currently been shown with those of Michael Rothenstein, well known English print maker, at Oxford, England.

"I would like to see a Biennial exhibition held in British Columbia, especially in Victoria," she said. "It would attract artists from all parts of the world."

"But there is another reason why we should promote international art exhibition," she added. "And that is because B.C. has some outstanding artists. We have first class potters, weavers, painters and sculptors."

She also said she would also like an exhibition in B.C. of works by French Canadian artists.

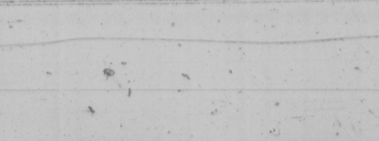
Penny-Wise Marinated "Kabobs"

from Woodward's

In saucepan, combine ½ envelope dehydrated onion soup mix, 1 cup catsup, 1 cup water, ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup salad oil, ¼ cup sugar, 2 tbsp. prepared mustard, 1 tbsp. lemon juice, 1 tsp. salt, (to taste) and dash tabasco.



Bring mixture to boil, then reduce heat and simmer for about 20 minutes. Allow sauce to cool completely.

Add 1 lb. round steak (or chuck with all fat removed), cut in 1 inche cubes to sauce. Add 4 medium potatoes, partly cooked then quartered (peeled) to sauce and allow to marinate for several hours, stirring occassionally. Remove meat and potatoes from sauce and reserve sauce.

Sprinkle meat with instant unseasoned meat tenderizer according to package directions. Cut 2 medium green peppers in good size pieces. Thread steak on skewers with potatoes and green peppers. Broil about 5 inches from heat (if using oven) for about 13 to 15 minutes or until meat is rare to medium rare. If using barbecue, cook kabobs over hot coals for about 10 to 15 minutes for rare to medium rare. (cooking time depends on heat of the coals).

Baste frequently with sauce and turn frequently to allow even cooking. Heat any extra sauce to pass with the kabobs... makes about 4 servings.

Mary Moore

By MARY MOOR

On the rare occasions when I eat in restaurants a lot comes clear. Caesar salad seems to be a regular on the menus.

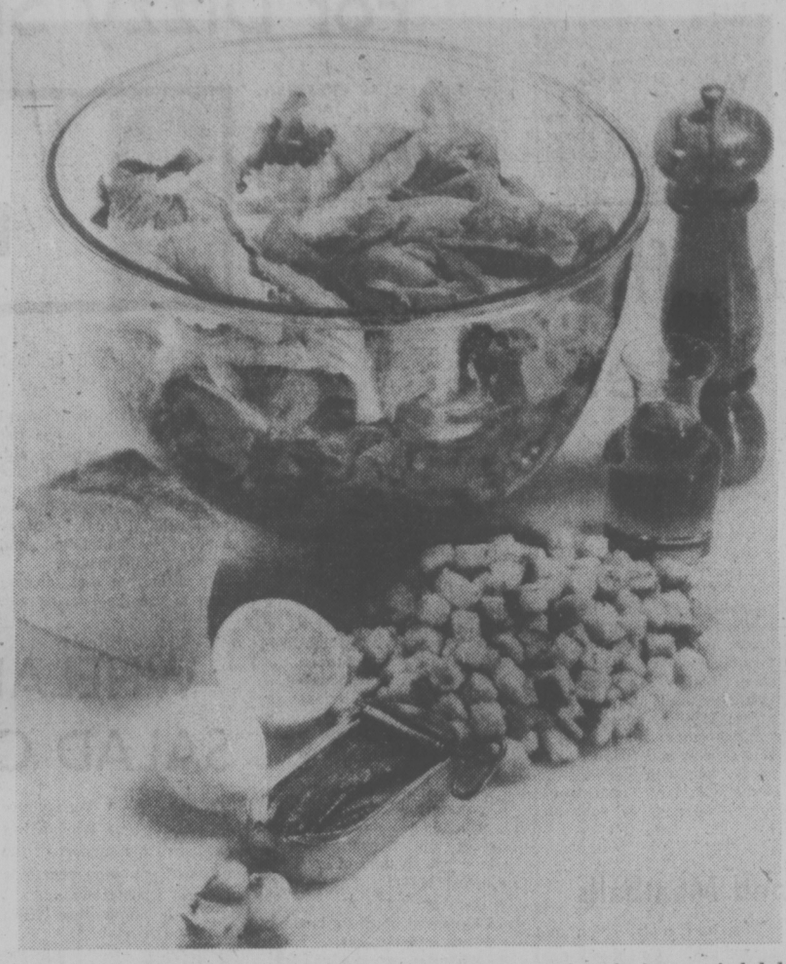
Two years ago I gave you the Caesar Salad recipe and many of you let me know you have adopted it as yours.

It is unique with its soft-cooked egg, bacon bits and anchovies. If you want to show off with great abandon you can toss the whole business at the table in front of all admiring eyes.

NOTE: This salad should be assembled at the last minute.

- 2 c. ¼" bread cubes (see below)
- ¼ c. crisp bacon bits
- ½ c. good quality oil
- 1 finely chopped clove of garlic (OR ½ tsp. garlic salt)
- 5 c. torn romaine or bibb lettuce (fairly well packed).
- 1 egg, soft-cooked in shell 1 minute
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire or H.P. Sauce
- ¼ c. lemon juice
- ½ tsp. salt
- ⅛ tsp. pepper
- ¼ c. grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ c. crumbled Blue cheese (optional)
- 6 anchovy fillets, cut up (optional)

Toast bread cubes in oven at 200 deg. Fahr. until dried out but not brown. Fry about three slices side bacon until just crisp. Chop and drain on paper towel.



Add garlic to oil and pour half of it over the dry bread cubes. Wash and dry greens, tear into bits and put in large salad bowl. Mix together 1-minute egg, shelled, Worcestershire or H.P. sauce, lemon juice, salt, pepper and remaining half of oil-garlic mixture.

Just before mealtime sprinkle Parmesan over greens and toss all together and serve. NOTE: If blue cheese and anchovies are included add them along with the Parmesan.

Serve at once.

Add this to your salad file and serve it often during the summer.

TASTE TELLS FOR THIS MD

WASHINGTON (WP) — Dr. Robert L. Henkin is an endocrinologist whose fascination in medical school with the mysteries of taste and smell has turned into a vocation.

His Georgetown University laboratory and clinic here deal with the little known afflictions of lost or impaired senses of taste and smell.

Every year, 500 to 700 patients flock to Henkin's clinic to be treated for a variety of sensory ailments. He has a devoted band of followers made up of people he has helped regain their sense of taste or smell and others who see him as their only hope.

He also has detractors in the medical professions, some of whom regard his research as esoteric and others who question his ethics.

While his sometimes controversial research led to his departure from the National Institutes of Health in 1975, Henkin has gained a reputation as a uniquely qualified expert, a one-of-a-kind scientist.

He has become a consultant in a series of multi-million dollar law suits involving chemical workers who have lost their senses of taste and smell.

He has also discovered a new protein in saliva, which he named gustin, and conducted research into a safe artificial sweetener at a time when saccharin, the last such item on the American market, faces a ban.

Henkin has searched the Bible, unsuccessfully, for cases of lost taste and smell. He has discovered a reference in the medical literature of the 17th century to a dog suffering lost sense of smell as a result of having its larynx removed. And he has noted that loss of the sense of smell was a key clue in a 1937 Agatha Christie novel, called "Poirot Loses a Client."

A major criticism levelled at Henkin by his professional colleagues is that he did not immediately publish the results of a study that discredited his own earlier work.

His first study, published in 1973, strongly implied that all loss of taste was due to low levels in the body of metals such as zinc and copper and that taste could be restored by raising those levels. The second study, with better controls, produced far less conclusive results.

Partly as a result of this dispute, Henkin says, he was forced out of NIH in 1975, and has continued his work at Georgetown. The second study was ultimately published in November 1976.

Loss of taste or smell, or both, is most frequently caused by influenza, a sharp blow to the head, or a variety of metabolic diseases such as diabetes or hypothyroid, Henkin said.

Aside from loss of taste and smell, those afflicted also frequently suffer from depression, and in about 25 per cent of all cases, loss of libido, he said.

FOOD & nutrition

Food Fads No Help to Athletes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Food fads, such as eating extra protein for "quick energy," will not help athletic performance as much as a good, balanced meal, nutritionists say.

"Generally, athletes who eat balanced meals from the four food groups — milk, meats, vegetables and fruits and breads — will get most of the nutrients they need," Dr. Melvin H. Williams said at a symposium attended by more than 500 persons coaches, team physicians and trainers.

The one-day meeting was sponsored by the California Dietetic Association and the Dairy Council of California in cooperation with the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

"Although it has been recommended by a number of professionals that protein intake be increased during athletic training, there is not much objective experimental evidence to support these contentions, especially in the trained, mature athlete," said Williams, director of the Human Performance Laboratory, Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Va.

He said a normal diet will supply necessary vitamins, eliminating the need for vitamin supplements.

"Athletes who think they can improve their performance with protein are victims of one of the oldest myths in sports," added Dr. Herman Johnson, acting chief, Division of Bio-energetics, Letterman Army Institute of Research, San Francisco.

He said the body does not store protein and unused protein is "converted to a carbohydrate-like compound and burned as fuel or stored as fat.'

Athletes who consume three or four times the recommended protein only get fat, he said.

However, Dr. V. Reggie Edgerton, professor of Kinesiology at UCLA, said iron can improve the performance of some athletes but warned that an overload of iron in the bloodstream can be just as bad as too little.

"Athletes — especially women — probably would improve their performance with iron if they are deficient in that nutrient," Edgerton said. "But it must be done carefully since dosing with iron can lead to iron overload, which is more undesirable than the anemia it's meant to cure."

Also addressing the group were Dr. David L. Costill, director and professor at the Human Performance Laboratory, Ball State University, Indiana, on the trend to build up carbohydrates; and Dr. Philip Weiser, director of the Department of Physiology, National Asthma Center, Denver, who said that athletes are born, not made, and athletic ability has more to do with genes than conditioning.

TOTS IN THE KITCHEN

TORONTO (CP) — Cookies do not have to come from the grocery store, kindergarten children in the Toronto borough of Scarborough have learned.

The five-year-olds are learning to cook and have watched as flour, eggs and sugar are mixed together to make cookies.

Before their introduction to the joys of cooking, the children thought cookies came from the grocery store, Iris Schickler, Scarborough's primary education supervisor, said.

Boys and girls alike at one junior public school in the borough work together to mix the ingredients and slide cookies on to the pan.

Besides learning to bake, the children practise reading the recipe and learn mathematics by setting the timer and by measuring quantities.

They also learn to share what they have made, Mrs. Schickler said.

Kindergarten children started cooking in class about 10 years ago but it has become more popular in recent years.

ENGLISH MUFFINS

½ c. lukewarm water
1 tsp. granulated sugar
¼ tsp. ginger
1 pkg. granular yeast
1 c. lukewarm water
3 tbsp. granulated sugar
½ c. skim milk powder
3¼ c. unsifted all-purpose flour (divided—see below)
1 egg
3 tbsp. melted butter
1½ tsp. salt
Corn meal (see below)

Into a measuring cup measure the first ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon sugar and ginger. Stir. Sprinkle yeast over and let stand 10 minutes.

Into a large mixing bowl measure the 1 cup lukewarm water, 3 tbsp. granulated sugar, skim milk powder and one cup of the flour. Stir and beat to mix until smooth. Beat in yeast liquid. Now add egg, melted butter, salt and one and one-half cups flour and beat until smooth.

Sprinkle kneading board with ¼ cup flour. Knead in flour — about 50 times. As dough becomes sticky sprinkle with a little more flour and continue kneading 150 times in all or until flour is worked in. Return to greased bowl, oil top of dough, cover and let rise covered 3 hours at room temperature.

Flour kneading board all over with ¼ cup flour. Turn dough out on it, pat out, then gently roll to 18x12" oblong. It is quite thin. Cut out with sharp 3½" round cutter and place on sheets of wax paper sprinkled evenly with corn meal. Let rise, 2 hours. I had 18 cut out muffins.

Heat an ungreased griddle (or electric frying pan) to 350 deg. Fahr. (not as hot as for pancakes). Carefully lift risen muffins to griddle on egg lifter and bake 20 minutes turning each over at halftime when bottom is rich gold. Continue until all are baked. notes; 1) If you have surplus muffins they may be freezerwrapped and frozen; 2) To serve, split with two forks and serve with butter and jam or marmalade; or 3) split and toast.

Baby Beefies and Meatballs

2 pounds ground beef
¾ cup rolled oats
½ cup finely chopped onion
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Dash savory
1 beaten egg
¼ cup milk
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

Mix beef, oats, onion and seasonings. Combine egg, milk and Worcestershire sauce. Add to meat, blending well. Divide mixture in half. Shape half in 4 loaves and remainder in about 24 1¼-inch meatballs. Bake loaves 1 hour at 325 degrees F. Place meatballs on rack in baking dish and bake 40 minutes at 325 degree F.

Serve 1 loaf per person and freeze remainder. Frozen loaves can be reheated 20 minutes at 350 degrees F.

Serve 4 meatballs per person and freeze remainder. Thaw about 2½ hours at room temperature. Serve as Meatballs in Mushroom Sauce, or Meatball Stroganoff.

Beard Is One Cure For Dizzy Shaver

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Every time I shave with an electric razor and run it over the side of my neck I get dizzy and a feeling as if I'm about to faint. I tested it with an ordinary razor and the same thing happened. Please explain.—Mr. K.H.M Miss.

Dear Mr. H.:

This bizzarre-sounding sympton is not really as "odd" as you think.

Two large blood vessels run through the neck, from the heart to the brain. These carotid arteries supply most of the blood the brain. On the outer surface of these arteries lies a tiny, but complex collection of highly sensitive nerves. These are known as "carotid sinuses" (in no way connected, of course, with the sinuses of the head).

In some people, especially past middle age, the movement of simply turning the head from side to side, or even wearing a very tight collar, can put pressure on the carotid sinus and produce a flash moment of dizziness or fainting.

Any pressrue on the neck, such as shaving, can do the same thing.

Having found that this occurs, my advice, of course, is to avoid too much pressure during the morning shave. (Have you thought of growing a beard?)

I have just bought a hearing aid on a trial basis. Even thought it is very costly I feel I am benefiting from its use. The one thing that bothers me is that the hearing aid picks up every sound, in addition to speech. I'm told I will get accustomed to it. Before I pay for this, what is your opinion? — Mrs. T.D.A., Maine.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Your complaint is identical with many people who first begin to use a hearing aid. These unwanted noises, like the clicking of shoes or the sound of an air-conditioner and dozens of other everyday sounds, are magnified and can be very disturbing.

But it is true that, as you learn to use the hearing aid, you will, block out many of these extraneous sounds and find that they are less and less disturbing.

Using a hearing aid under all circumstances is the only way that one can adjust to it and gain its maximum benefit.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH ... Self-medication can be as dangerous as using the medicines that were prescribed for your "best friend."

WHELAN BACKS SALAD CAMPAIGN

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has reaffirmed his support of the efforts of fruit and vegetable growers, wholesalers and retailers in promoting fresh fruits and vegetables.

The annual salad campaign scheduled from June 29 to September 3 will coincide with the high production season of top-quality, fresh, Canadian-grown produce.

"An increase in consumption of fresh fruits and vegetables will promote the health of Canadians and certainly help our producers," Whelan said. "At this time of year consumers should take advantage of the variety and food value of Canadian produce temptingly displayed on the market at the most reasonable prices all year.

"Most consumers take a lot for granted when it comes to food. They're not aware of the effort that goes into producing a quart of tomatoes, or a bushel of apples and into getting them to market in the freshest possible condition.

"Agriculture Canada's fruit and vegetable inspectors across the country play a very important role in checking produce on its way to market and in seeing that it comes up to the quality standards administered by the federal department.

"I would like to join the industry in urging Canadians to eat salads — both vegetables and fruits — as part of a balanced diet," Whelan said.

Mockingbird Song Holds Joy, Sorrow

DEAR ABBY: DESPERATE wrote that his recently deceased wife had so loved the song of the mockingbird that had sung in their yard each morning that she made a recording of it. He said the same bird returns to sing each day, and his song brings back such painful memories that he feels he must either destroy that bird or go mad.

Perhaps we are neighbors. A mockingbird has been singing in my area, too. My husband who died last year, loved the song of that bird, but it neither pains nor depresses me to hear it. Instead it gives me a feeling of inner peace, comfort and joy — as though God were telling me that my dear one is still nearby. — "E"

DEAR ABBY: For DESPERATE who wishes to shoo away the mockingbird that perches on his wire:

Buy a rubber snake in a toy department and twist it around the wire. We use them in our fruit trees to keep the birds from pecking at the fruit. (I'm told that a long nylon stocking waving in the breeze is just as effective.) — OCEANSIDE

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the man who wanted to get rid of the mockingbird because it was bringing back sad memories of his deceased wife, I think I have the solution. He mentioned that his wife had recorded the bird's song. If he will play the recording back to the bird while it's singing, the bird will think it is another male intruding in his territory, and after a few unsuccessful attempts to locate his competition, he will leave and never return. It works. — TRIED IT

DEAR ABBY: Please tell DESPERATE that the pain he feels is within himself, not from the bird, and killing the bird or chasing it away will not ease that pain. The mockingbird's song could help relieve his pain if he would only view it differently.

The song of the mockingbird is a gift that his dear departed wife has left him, since she still lives in his heart. He should enjoy the memory of how much his wife loved that early morning music while the rest of the world was quiet. — A.W.M.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell DESPERATE I had a similar experience. A pair of cardinals made their nest under our window. My husband and I watched and worried over them together. Then I too lost my husband. After the cardinals left the nest, I had the shrub cut down because I couldn't bare to hear their song.

That was last year. This year they've returned and made their nest nearby. Although tears are on my cheeks now as I write this, I love to hear those cardinals sing because they bring back so many fond memories. Faith in God and time helps us. — H.M.

DEAR ABBY: After moving into a new home three years ago, a mockingbird set up court in my apple tree. I say "court" because he sang 26 different songs all night long. I just squirted him with water three or four times, and when he decided he had had enough baths, he moved to a new territory. — BIRD-FREE

Scrub and pare potatoes. Slice ⅛' thick (no thicker) and carefully, neatly, closely line sides and bottom of very large shallow casserole OR two medium with potato slices.

Cut fish fillets into bite-sized pieces, and cover potatoes with them; cover with washed and quartered mushrooms then cover with shrimp. Pour sauce all over top being sure it filters through contents. Brush protruding edges of potatoes with some of the sauce.

Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 40 minutes.

Comfrey Adds Sparkle as Well as Nutrients to Food

hilda beastall

Comfrey is a lustily growing vegetable plant, or a herb as it is often listed, which may already be in your garden. Once you have a root planted, no skill is needed in growing it. All that is needed is a good soil, moisture and a fair amount of sunshine, and a firm hand to control the spread of the rootstock to surrounding good soil.

As a vegetable, it enhances almost any other green vegetable when cooked together, and comfrey is available fresh from the garden from earliest spring to late fall.

It is the young growing tips that are used in general family cooking. They are added to almost any vegetable dish, as well as in savory fritters, omelets, casseroles, and pancakes.

During winter, the young leaves, dried in summer, add their nutrients to frozen, canned, or otherwise less than garden fresh vegetables which we must then use.

What is so good about comfrey is that it has a long history of use as a valuable source of vitamins and of important trace elments which might otherwise be lacking in today's average diet.

Comfrey has been used as emergency stock feed during grain shortages in war periods, even as soy beans; comfrey is known to be richer in protein than alfalfa, having also acceptable ratings of calcium, phosphorus, potassium and manganese. And of great importance for human consumption especially, comfrey lacks the oxalic acid which makes high intake of many other green leafy vegetables, particularly spinach, undesirable.

Comfrey grows as well in a heavy clay soil as in a lighter loam soil, needing no form of fertilizer. Moisture at the root area encourages constant production of new growth. Stems grow to a height of three to four feet by mid June, thick and hairy, with hairy leaves to seven inches long by three wide.

Pretty pinky-blue tubular flowers appear at the tips of stems. The bees like the flowers as would hummingbirds no doubt if we had them visiting as they used to. No seed is set to my knowledge and I have never seen a seedling in the 20-odd years of growing comfrey.

It is the young tips we use, cutting them while the hairy leaves are still furled around the central bud. The next larger leaves on the stems are the ones to dry for winter using.

Early in spring, I take and cook every new shoot as it comes through the soil, but finally they get ahead of me so that many stems grow to full height and flower.

Prevent the plant from encroaching too far into the garden, and you have a treasure for life once you get a root, such as the herb farm sells.

As the leaves get too coarse for cooking, cut the stems down and add to compost, where their goodness again is useful.

A good soaking with water brings new shoots along again almost immediately.

Now for a few ideas on using comfrey in daily meals.

Some people like the young leafy shoots chopped into green salads with endive, lettuce, green onions or cabbage. We prefer it lightly cooked, for about three minutes, with sweet onions, zucchini squash, or in a delicately flavored comfrey soup.

COMFREY SOUP

2 cups comfrey shoots
1½ cups potato stock (or water)
¼ tsp salt (optional)
3 tbsp powdered skim milk
1 tbsp soy flour
1 tbsp soy oil

Wash and cut comfrey into small pieces; drop at once into boiling water, or potato stock. Liquid from other vegetables is good too. Cook gently three minutes.

Remove from heat. Add salt, milk powder and flour, using a wire whisk to remove lumps in beating.

Reheat and stir until slightly thickened and smooth.

Remove from heat, stir in the oil; serve in 2 bowls with homemade wholewheat buns and Cheddar cheese for lunch.

Comfrey has a thickening action by itself; it is mucilaginous in much the same way as the okra plant, called Gumbo in the southern States.

Comfrey Pancakes make a fine holiday or weekend breakfast. Get a volunteer to bring in comfrey shoots from the garden while the pancake mixture is put together.

COMFREY PANCAKES

1 cup wholewheat flour
¾ tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup skim milk from powder
1 egg
1 tbsp soft margarine or oil
1 cup chopped comfrey shoots

Mix dry ingredients in bowl. Beat egg in milk in measuring cup.

Wash and cut comfrey into small pieces. Add to bowl and pour over milk and egg. Add margarine or oil; mix all lightly together. Mixture can be lumpy.

Drop by large spoonfuls into hot pan containing oil or soft margarine. Brown both sides, each for about 3 minutes.

Serve with lemon juice or plain yogurt.

Comfrey Fritters have been known for years in parts of Germany; some of you with German cookbooks may come across other recipes for using this economical and nutritious plant which makes delicious meals, for twentieth century homemakers.

Lemon Fruit Bowl For Garden Party

4 eggs
½ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
6 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup water
½ cup whipping cream
1 cup cantaloupe
2 cups (½ medium) honeydew melon
3 cups watermelon, cubed
2 oranges
1 grapefruit
1 cup fresh pear, diced
1 cup fresh apple, diced
2 bananas, cut in chunks
1 cup canned pineapple, cubed or (1 small ripe pineapple)
1 cup fresh strawberries, halved
1 cup burgundy grapes (optional)
½ cup sugar

Beat eggs slightly in the top of a double boiler, stir in sugar, butter or margarine, lemon rind and juice, and water. Cook, stirring constantly, over simmering water for 15-20 minutes, or until very thick. Pour into a small bowl, cover and chill until completely cold.

Pare the cantaloupe and honeydew melon. Halve lengthwise and scoop out seeds. Cut into balls with a melon-ball cutter or cube. Prepare orange and grapefruit sections and the remaining fruit as directed. Combine fruits in a serving bowl, coat evenly with sugar, cover and chill.

Beat cream until stiff in a small bowl. Fold into the chilled lemon mixture, spoon over mixture into dessert dishes and serve with lemon mixture over top. Decorate with a whole strawberry, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: Up until a few months ago eggplant was one of my least favorite vegetables. Then I decided to become a vegetarian and began preparing it in various new ways. Now eggplant really satisfies my hunger for something "meaty." If they are easy to grow, I'd like to plant some in my yard.—J. T., Vancouver.

DEAR J. T.: Eggplant is easy to grow. You just need lots of room. Or you can plant one or two in your flowerbed. The seeds require a long time to develop, so most gardeners buy seedlings at the nursery. Set the young plants 25 inches apart, well into the spring when soil is warm. Seeds can take up to three weeks to germinate, and then another eight or 10 before they're ready to set out. Eggplant is a heat lover and needs to grow steadily and unchecked throughout the summer. Water regularly. Feed every six weeks with fish emulsion.

We love eggplant too. They taste so good in eggplant parmesan, caponata, stuffed, chopped, steamed, and they are so beautiful! Erica Jong even write a poem about eggplant!, so they must be gaining in popularity!

Carpeting shoppers should know that light colors, especially yellows, golds and oranges, tend to show soil more than medium to dark tones. And if you have your heart set on a velvety cut pile, ask if it has been "heat set." This means the base of each tuft it fused into the backing in order to make the pile resist pulling free.

A fresh grass stain on your white tennis shorts will darken if you don't treat it right away. Try rubbing a little vegetable oil into the stain before washing the shorts. If that doesn't work, sponge the green with rubbing alcohol. If the green has turned brown, dip a lemon into salt and rub the spot. It won't harm the fibers as much as the bleach you would need for the job.

Perfection with French Bread Not Impossible to Achieve tiny bennett

By TINY BENNETT

Books on cooking tend to treat the baking of French bread with deep awe, as if it is an almost impossible task for the homemaker to accomplish.

One of my favorite cooking writers, Mrs. Julia Childs, an international authority on French cuisine, said in a Time magazine interview that in trying to bake French bread she had gone through 250 pounds of flour, to get it close to the real thing.

And when the Time-Life series of cooking books, Foods of the World, produced the French Provincial Cooking edition, it did not include a recipe for bread, on the basis that French homemakers don't bake bread — they buy it.

Well, maybe I'm doing the classical bit about a fool rushing in where angels fear to tread, but I've been baking petit pain ordinaire with great success for many years. And even if it falls short of the ideal turned out by a 300-year-old Paris bakery, I've had no complaints. In fact my French bread is worth every bit of the work involved, since my family act as if it is a really superior treat. They eat it like cake, with some sweet butter and home-made strawberry jam.

All the authorities insist that the baking of French bread calls for special flour—unbleached hard wheat bread flour — but where I live I can't buy this so I bake my bread with great success using the standard white all-purpose flour from my village supermarket. Using the special flour, if you can get it, or otherwise using the hard wheat all-purpose, try this fine bread recipe:

TINY'S FRENCH BREAD

Sprinkle one packet of active dry yeast into ¼ cup of warm water (I scientifically test it with a finger a la baby's bottle), add 1 tsp sugar and stir, and then place near the stove in a warm spot, to cream up to almost double size.

Into a small but heavy saucepan combine 1½ cups milk — I use skim, but use what you have— ½ cup water and 2 tsp salt, and heat to lukewarm on the stove. (Again, a finger makes a good test unit for heat, and why not — both hands will knead the mix.)

Pour the lukewarm milk-water-salt mixture into a big mixing bowl and watch there is not a residue of salt in the pot, and stir in the double yeast. And then add five cups of flour — one cup at a time — stirring it in well with a spoon and then using the hands to thoroughly mix and knead the dough, taking in all the loose flour at the sides and bottom. One begins the kneading at this stage . . . in the bowl.

When all the flour is taken up flop the dough ball onto a bread board or a big pastry sheet and begin the knead using the heels of the hand and biting in deep with your fingers. Very lightly dust the kneading surface with scattered flour, and be very light-handed here, because this is not a sticky dough. Knead for at least 10 minutes, or until the dough becomes satiny and springy.

(I am six-foot, six-inches tall and weighing 245 lbs, I figure I've an edge when it comes to kneading dough. So guide yourself by the springy texture of the ball of dough — it could take longer.)

When the ball of dough is ready roll it around in a well-buttered bowl and cover with a warm damp cloth to rise to double its size—about 1½ hrs. Punch it down, remove to the board and knead for a couple of minutes, divide into three balls and put back into the bowl and cover for a second rising — about 45 minutes.

Lightly dust cookie sheets with yellow cornmeal and roll each risen ball of dough into a long, narrow loaf. Cut three diagonal slashes on each loaf and, placing them on the cookie sheets, cover with a warm damp cloth and let rise to double size — about one hour, depending on the kitchen warmth.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees, placing a pan of boiling water on the floor of the oven — steam makes fine crust — and put in all three risen loafs. After 15 minutes reduce the heat to 350 degrees and brush the tops of the loaves with a beaten mix of an egg in one tbs cold water and repeat this twice more during the 30 minutes baking time at 350 degrees.

When tapped, the finished loaves should give out a hollow sound when perfectly baked.

JELLIED FRESH PLUMS

2 envelopes plain gelatin
½ cup cold water
1¼ cups hot water
¾ cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup lemon juice
⅓ cup orange juice
2 cups sliced fresh B.C. plums
½ cup chopped walnuts
Dash of salt

Soften gelatin in cold water for 10 minutes. Dissolve in hot water. Stir in sugar and juices. Chill until thick but not set. Fold in sliced plums, walnuts and salt. Turn into 5-cup mould, rinsed out with cold water. Chill until firm. Serves 6-8.

PEACH GLOW

1 cup cold milk
½ cup Sun-Rype Orange Juice
2 fresh Peaches, peeled and quartered
3-4 tblsp. granulated sugar
4 ice cubes

Blend all ingredients at high speed in blender for 45 seconds, or until smooth. Serves 2.

TRACE MINERALS ESSENTIAL

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

It's surprising the number of myths that have grown up around what we eat. Some claim that garlic has magic healing qualities while others maintain unswerving loyalty to vitamin and protein supplements.

Such single mindedness is silly. We need all nutrients: fats, carbohydrates, proteins, vitamins, water and minerals, in balance, every day for health — and garlic occasionally for flavor, not health.

Of all the nutrients, minerals such as iron and calcium are the most neglected. Even less prominent in the nutrition lore is guidance about trace minerals. They are needed by our bodies in very minute amounts but are available quite readily from all sorts of common foods.

Zinc is an example. We have become much more aware of how important it is for physical growth and sexual development, in healing wounds and burns, in getting rid of any carbon monoxide that might get into, of form in the body, in helping many enzymes keep our bodies functioning and in developing the sense of taste that makes us enjoying eating. We also know that zinc is an important part of insulin which is needed for our bodies to use carbohydrates. Scientists from Vanderbilt and Wayne State Universities in the United States and from The American University fo Beirut and from Pahlavi University in Iran have reported cases of severe zinc deficiency in the Middle East that caused dwarfism and serious physical and sexual retardation.

Recently, researchers at the University of Colorado have pointed out that when cow's milk is processed to make a baby's formula resembling human milk, a substantial amout of zinc is destroyed. When they compared the effect of feeding babies a formula with zinc added to it or one with no zinc added, they found that the baby boys grew by almost an inch more and weighed an average of one pound more when zinc was given. Baby girls do not seem to need as much zinc as boys; so they did not show the same effect. All babies, getting zinc, showed lesser tendency to vomiting and diarrhea.

Canadian food and drug regulations require that baby formulas be enriched with zinc. So, this is not a problem in Canada. Mother's milk, of course, contains adequate amounts of zinc. So, breast-fed babies are taken care of.

But babies are not the only ones who need zinc. We all do. The Canadian Dietary Standard for a baby in the first year of life is about 5 milligrams, the level rises to 7 milligrams for the 7 year old, to 12 milligrams in the late teens and remains at about 10 milligrams in the adult years, except for pregnant women (12 milligrams) and nursing mothers (16 milligrams).

A balanced diet solves the problem of measuring and worrying about whether or not we meet our need for zinc. Four slices of whole wheat bread contains 2 milligrams of zinc as will one ounce of unrefined cereal such as oatmeal. White bread and refined cereals short-change us nutritionally — they provide considerably less zinc than their whole grain counterparts. Four ounces of meat, poultry or fish should contain about 4 milligrams, a serving of baked beans will have 3 milligrams, and a glass of milk will provide about 1½ milligrams. So, you don't have to rush out and buy zinc tablets. Consider the foods you normally eat and just eat the right foods in the right amounts to get the nutrients your body needs.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In duplicate bridge, where everybody plays the identical deals, when one arrives at an inferior game contract on his own power, and goes down, he invariably gets a poor score. The reason is that a few of the other pairs will usually fulfill the same game contract, either by brilliance or by a defender's mistake. And a few others will stay at a part-score contract on the same cards, thus obtaining a plus score instead of a minus score.

And so when one voluntarily arrives at a game contract that seems doomed to defeat, he goes all out to make the contract even at the risk of being slaughtered if his plan of attack fails. Such was the case in today's deal.

South's rebid of one no-trump was a poor choice. He should have rebid two diamonds. Had he done so, he probably would have arrived at the superior contract of four hearts.

When the dummy came into view, South saw that he would be defeated if the opponents could diagnose the setup correctly. His only legitimate chance of fulfilling his contract was either opponent's possessing the doubleton Q-J of spades. In this situation, five spade tricks would be made. But South new that the possibility of this precise distribution existing was very slim.

So he grasped at his only hope. He won the opening club lead with the board's ace and promptly led the diamond jack. When East played low, South put up his king. When the king won the trick, South had his contract (for a poor score as it turned out, since most of the other North-South pairs reached a four-heart contract, making at least 10 tricks.)

Had East put up the diamond ace at trick two and returned a club, declarer would have been down two tricks. But how could East have known the true situation? And if West had the diamond ace, South would have gone down three tricks, losing five clubs and two diamonds. But declarer really had no option other than to live dangerously.

Fraser Accused of Patronage After Hiring Ex-Son-in-Law

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser was accused of patronage Tuesday for appointing Don Larsen to the $29,000-a-year job of projects manager for the newly-created B.C. Building Corporation.

NDP leader Dave Barrett also accused Fraser and the government of being hypocrites for hiring Larsen, who is the former husband of the minister's foster daughter.

"It stinks, it smells, it is a matter of shame when a minister hires his ex son-in-law for a $29,000-a-year job," Barrett said during debate on Fraser's budgetary estimates.

The opposition leader asked why the government bothered to spend $400,000 hiring consultants to make recommendations on how to set up the new corporation, "and then ignoring the recommendations by hiring his ex son-in-law."

The NDP has opposed the creation of the BCBC, saying that it will provide patronage to friends of the government.

The corporation is being set up to handle all government space requirements. Most of the public works department employees are to be transferred to the BCBC with the loss of 800 positions.

Barrett accused the government of throwing $400,000 away, particularly since Fraser refuses to table the consultants' report.

The minister said Larsen's appointment was a political one done through order-in-council.

"I never asked Peat, Marwick for their advice on this, and I take full responsibility. He works for me and not for BCBC. I did not need that firm to advise me on that appointment."

Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) said the reason the minister refuses to table the report is that it contains "more bad news for the public service, that there will be further dismissals."

Outside the house, Fraser said he does not anticipate releasing the report until after April 1, when the BCBC is in full operation, because it deals with certain positions which are to be eliminated.

Potatoes Dominate Meeting

The public accounts committee of the legislature, which examines government spending, somehow Tuesday ended up discussing the nutritional value of the potato.

Esquimalt Socred MLA Lyle Kahl closely questioned Dr. Bill Powrie, head of the department of food science at the University of B.C., on exactly what nutritional value could be found in the french fries produced by the government-owned Swan Valley Foods Ltd.

Powrie told Kahl that potatoes have a high protein value of about five per cent, but that didn't satisfy Kahl.

"I don't mean potatoes, I mean french fries," he explained.

Powrie told him french fries were only potatoes "with a little water taken out and some heat put in," and the nutritional value stood.

The public accounts committee spent the first hour and 45 minutes of its regular Tuesday meeting discussing procedural hassles.

The committee voted to call B.C. Railway vice-president Mac Norris July 19 to explain under oath why he did not show up, as requested, at a public accounts meeting last week.

Committee chairman Dave Stupich (NDP-Nanaimo) claimed last week's meeting was on while secretary George Kerster (SC-Coquitlam) claimed the meeting was cancelled.

Norris was to have been a witness at the meeting, but flew back to Vancouver after hearing from Kerster's office that the meeting was cancelled for lack of a quorum.

MLA Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver-Centre) introduced a motion at Tuesday's meeting to have Norris called before the bar of the house for failing to obey the request to appear, but the motion was later reduced to a request to appear only before the committee to explain his absence.

Ferry Lack Criticized By Barber

B.C. Ferries should have scheduled extra sailings Thursday before the three-day Canada Day weekend, says Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria).

Barber told the legislature the ferry's summer schedule started July 1, but additional sailings June 30 would have allowed Vancouver Island residents to embark earlier on their holidays.

Transport Minister Jack Davis replied that extra sailings were added June 30 and indicated the only problems had been at Schwartz Bay on Vancouver Island.

Barber also predicted the new B.C. Building Corp. (BCBC) will become a source of scandal for the government.

He told Public Works Minister Alex Fraser that the minister has "set up a monster that's going to devour him."

Barber said the legislation establishing the BCBC makes no provision for tendering and, therefore the corporation could become "the biggest pork barrel in the province."

When the public works department is phased out, said Barber, some of the work done by its employees will be turned over to private enterprise.

He said persons now employed by the department would have their livelihoods endangered through resultant job losses and downgrading of jobs.

GOV'T WORKER TOTAL REMAINS A MYSTERY

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson has been trying for five months to find out how many people work for the provincial government.

He tried again in the legislature Tuesday and was told finally that Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will get the information for him, but had no luck trying to find out why he couldn't find out.

Gibson said he phoned the information services division of the Public Service Commission in February to find out the number of government employees as of Dec. 31, 1976.

He was told he would have to wait for the information until the 1976 PSC annual report was published.

The report was published in April but, contrary to previous years, contained no figures on the number of provincial employees.

On April 22, Gibson again phoned the commission, but was told this time the commission's responsibility for such information had been turned over to the Government Employees Relations Bureau.

After several more calls, Gibson said he was told the person to talk to was M. F. Churchill, director of operations in the ministry of finance.

This time he was told to make the request in writing, which he did on April 25.

On April 29, Churchill wrote back, saying he regretted that he was not at liberty to release the information. He suggested Gibson ask the finance minister after the legislature reopened June 13.

Gibson asked his question Tuesday and Wolfe promised him the information but appeared confused as to why it had been withheld.

Gibson earlier this session introduced a private members will entitled the Access to Information Act which would guarantee public access to such information.

OPPOSITION NAILS SOCREDS FOR 'LAVISH' CARPET BUYS

The opposition tried to pull the rug out from under the Social Credit cabinet Tuesday as ministers were called on the carpet for lavishly refurbishing their offices.

Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said Attorney-General Garde Gardom ordered an Italian-made rug for his office because he didn't want to be outdone by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy.

Referring to similar Social Credit allegations of wasteful spending by the previous NDP government, Lauk said it is clear Social Credit members were spouting hypocritical nonsense at that time.

He said McCarthy replaced a 19th-century Rattenbury rug in her office with a brown pile rug that cost $26.50 per square yard.

"It's typical Social Credit ru

"It's a typical Social Credit rug — thoroughly synthetic . . . talk about spendthrift ministers," Lauk said as the great rug debate raged on during discussion of budget estimnates of Public Works Minister Alex Fraser.

Gardom confirmed that he had ordered a special rug for his office, but said he has no idea if it is coming from Italy.

During renovations of the attorney-general's offices, work crews installed what Gardom described as "brindle brown" carpet throughout the suite.

Gardom said he wanted "judicial red" carpet in his own office, the same color as the carpets in Supreme Courts.

"But I didn't want any extra cost so I told them if it cost more than the brown one I'd pay the difference myself," he said.

Gardom said the rug has not yet arrived and he's not sure if it's ever been ordered yet.

Kickbacks Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Allied Chemical Corp. allowed Canadian and European subsidiaries to kick back more than $4 million to foreign customers to stimulate sales, previously secret government records showed Tuesday.

The records made public by the Securities and Exchange Commission also showed Allied Chemical was moving cautiously to correct any illegalities until last spring.

Then a letter from an SEC enforcement official, Michael McConihe, prompted Allied into what its law firm described as a "crash investigation."

Within two months, auditors went through five years of records to turn up payments of more than $4 million overseas and nearly $300,000 to the purchasing agent of a major U.S. client.

The new records provided few facts about either the recipients or the makers of the payments that Allied Chairman John Connor said "could destroy the corporation's business and ruin the individuals involved" if continued and made public.

Coulthard Work To Be Presented

A concert of works by one of Canada's leading composers, Jean Coulthard, will be presented by Victoria Conservatory of Music at Craigdarroch Castle, Thursday at 8 p.m. Ms. Coulthard is currently teaching a master course in composition in the conservatory's summer music program which continues through July 22.

Among the featured performers will be pianist Walter Prossnitz, flautist James Kennedy, and Vancouver bassoonist, Christopher Millard.

Building Delay Asked

A West German developer has asked Victoria city council to allow him to build a downtown $10 million office - commercial - residential complex in three stages instead of all at once.

R. R. Roth of Munich, through his architect Wilfred Buttjes of Vancouver, told the planning committee Tuesday adverse economic conditions make it increasingly difficult to proceed with the full program for the complex bounded by Douglas, Cormorant, Blanshard and Pandora.

Buttjes said construction on the first $4 million stage, a 50,000 square foot office and commercial building, could start early next year.

He couldn't give starting dates for the other stages but each would stand on its own and not be dependent on the others.

The second stage is a three-storey hotel and two-storey shopping mall.

The last phase would be the addition of 120 residential suites on top of the second stage.

The planning committee referred Roth's change of plans to the administration for study.

Solar Power Likely Competitive in Three Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — If electricity prices continue to rise, solar energy may be the cheapest way to provide heat and hot water in large buildings within three years, a United States study said Tuesday.

The report also predicted private homes, office and apartment buildings and shopping centres all may turn to heat and light from the sun for large parts of their energy requirements in the future.

Most buildings still would require part of their energy from backup heating systems and solar energy will not make a dent for at least 20 years in industries that can burn coal, the study said.

The report, by the federal office of technology assessment, said government policies should give a bigger push to improvement and use of small solar energy units serving individual homes or buildings.

Benefits would include a cleaner environment and increased employment through construction of solar units.

The main problem, it said, is not the unpredictability of sunshine or the need for scientific break-throughs, but the cost of solar energy compared to the other energy sources—natural gas, coal and electricity.

The study was based largely on computer analysis of solar energy economics in four cities—Albquerque, N.M., Omaha, Neb., Fort Worth, Tex., and Boston—using various types of solar equipment with electric or natural gas backup systems.

Summing up the findings, the report said:

—Solar equipment can produce hot water for domestic use at costs which are competitive with that of conventional water heaters.

—If electricity prices rise at a rate of about 1.5 per cent a year, "it should be possible by 1980 to build solar systems which supply 100 per cent of the heating and hot water needs of large buildings in three of the four cities" at prices competitive with electricity. The exception was Omaha.

—With a 20-per-cent investment tax credit favoring solar installations, solar heating and hot water would be competitive in all four cities. The Carter administration already has proposed a similar credit.

—If electricity prices rise at about two per cent a year and the cost of solar cells has been reduced drastically by 1985, as proposed by the energy research and development administration, "on-site solar devices would be able to generate supplemental electricity at prices competitive with electricity from other sources in wide areas of the country."

The report said, "Solar energy is not expected to be competitive with heating or hot water systems which use natural gas at today's prices but it may be competitive with synthetic gas (when it becomes available) in many parts of the country for these applications."

The report urged the use of cost techniques which average the cost of building and using an energy system over its useful lifetime.

Court Backs Wash. Indian Fish Rights

SEATTLE (AP) — A United States district court judge Tuesday refused to grant an injunction against federal regulations which grant eight Indian tribes special rights to fish on Fraser River salmon runs.

Judge Walter McGovern said the international treaty governing the Fraser River salmon harvest does not extend to the allocation of fish within the United States.

Angry non-Indian gillnetters and purse seiners were talking Tuesday night of organizing a protest march Thursday morning, possibly against the U.S. courthouse.

"The associations (Puget Sound Gillnetters and the Purse Seine Vessel Owners) are considering emphasizing their protest with a demonstration in Seattle," said Charles Yates, a lawyer for the gillnetters. "A hard decision would have to be made early Wednesday."

The two groups of non-Indian commercial fishermen had argued a two-day fishing week contained in international regulations was binding on all U.S. fishermen, including Indians.

McGovern said the international rules, ordered by the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission, have no effect in the U.S. unless the U.S. government approves them.

He said the department of state and department of the interior had specifically rejected the international rules as they apply to the eight Indian tribes.

The tribes are among those covered by U.S. District Judge George Boldt's 1974 ruling that treaty Indians of western Washington have the right to catch half of harvestable fish runs in waters off their reservations.

The interior department issued regulations which give Indians extra, exclusive fishing time each week so that they might harvest their share of the Fraser catch.

In Vancouver, George Hewison of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said it is ironic the Canadian government has made no protest in the matter of the Indian fishing rights.

He said the government has expressed its concern, but hasn't taken any action, leading him to believe there has been a deal between Washington, D.C., and Ottawa.

INSPECT N-PLANT PLAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration is studying a plan to ask India, Israel and South Africa to allow periodic inspections of their secret nuclear plants.

The plan would involve a promise by the administration not to ask the three how much plutonium and weapons-grade uranium the secret plants have produced as long as the countries open up the plants to future inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, administration sources say.

This "didn't-look-back" aspect to President Carter's policy against nuclear-weapons spread now is being discussed in the White House and the state department as possibly the only way to get India, Israel and South Africa anywhere close to the camp of nations signing and ratifying a treaty that prohibits the spread of nuclear weapons.

None of the three has signed the Non-Proliferation Treaty, and none has allowed any inspection of the secret nuclear facilities each has in somewhat inaccessible regions.

India built a research reactor and a plutonium extraction plant outside Trombay for $30 million. The plutonium plant has been extracting the metal from spent nuclear fuel since 1964. It was this plutonium that India used to make and explode its first atomic bomb in 1974.

Israel has a research reactor that produces about 15 pounds of plutonium yearly at Dimona in the Negev Desert. Experts believe a plutonium-extraction plant is connected to the reactor at Dimona, which has been in operation for 20 years. Israel twice turned down the requests of 11 U.S. senators late last year to visit the Dimona plant.

Of the three plants the White House would like to see safeguarded, the South African uranium enrichment plant at Pelindaba is the newest. Never opened to U.S. eyes, the Pelindaba plant is believed to have gone into production more than a year ago.

Protesters Freed

TACOMA (AP) — Most of 29 persons arrested for allegedly trespassing on the Trident submarine base were released Tuesday, but at least one protester refused to leave jail, authorities said.

The men and women, including several Canadians, were arrested Monday after they climbed fences or rowed onto beaches during an anti-nuclear demonstration at the Trident site, near Bangor on the Hood Canal.

United States magistrate John Weinberg, seeing the demonstrators six at a time, began releasing them on their peronal recognizance. He scheduled arraignment for them for July 15.

One defendant, Dorothy Trabits of Mobile, Ala., refused to sign her bond. She was being held at Tacoma City Jail.

Friends of the woman indicated they were considering following the same course.

Each is accused of trespassing on federal property — a petty offense punishable by fines of up to $500 and up to a six-month jail term.

The hearing was attended by about 50 persons, many of whom applauded as groups were led in to see Weinberg. At one point, the magistrate threatened to clear the room.

Anti-Love Potion May Curb Moths

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Man, worried about his trees, has put one over on the gypsy moth caterpillar that eats them.

He has developed a love potion that drives the caterpillar's father to distraction. That's OK, because man wants to keep him away from the caterpillar's mother.

The idea is to stymie reproduction, and thus eventually stunt the growth of the gypsy moth's family tree.

"What we're trying to do is short circuit their sex life," says Dr. Alan Cameron, a Pennsylvania State University entomologist who is working with the potion.

"If we're successful, it's conceivable we could prevent the female from being fertilized."

The potion is a synthetic reproduction of the pheromone, or sex attractant, given off by the female moth after she emerges from her cocoon. It's this pheromone that attracts and stimulates the males. Once together, he fertilizes her eggs. Come spring, they hatch into the leaf-munching caterpillars.

The idea is to keep the male moth on a wild goose chase from the time he emerges from the cocoon until he dies, usually in about seven days.

So Dr. Cameron and federal agriculture agents have sprayed the woods with their love potion and from time to time peek in to see whether any moths are making whoopee.

"The results are encouraging," he reports. "But we have not been able to demonstrate that we have totally eliminated mating."

COLOR BARS LOWERED

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. government announced a five-year plan Tuesday for fully desegregating state college systems in Virginia and five other states, while ensuring the continued existence of the states' historically black colleges.

Court-ordered guidelines issued by the department of health, education and welfare call for achieving this goal by increasing the number of blacks at predominantly white schools and the number of whites at schools formerly limited to blacks.

However, the plan recognizes "the unique role of black colleges in meeting the educational needs of black students" by assigning them a special, two-stage role in the desegregation process.

Taiwan Attack Possible—China

By ROSS H. MUNRO
Special to The Times

PEKING — A senior Chinese leader has again told the United States that the People's Republic of China has the right to decide whether to invade the island of Taiwan.

In an unusually tough statement for the official Chinese media to issue, the New China News Agency Tuesday night quoted Vice-Premier Li Haien-nien, speaking with Elmo Zumwalt, former U.S. chief of naval operations, currently visiting China.

"As to when and in what way the Chinese people are to liberate their sacred territory of Taiwan," Vice-Premier Li is quoted as telling Zumwalt, "that is entirely China's internal affair, which brooks no interference."

The statement was another Chinese rebuff of U.S. probes for some sort of direct or indirect assurance from Peking that it doesn't intend to use military force to reunite Taiwan, now the Republic of China, with the mainland.

The United States has diplomatic relations, as well as a military defence agreement, with Taiwan and it is the unassured future of that island which has blocked full diplomatic relations between Peking and Washington.

Zumwelt said in an interview Tuesday morning that he told the Chinese vice-premier "it would be very difficult for any U.S. administration to overlook the strong support the American people have for the government in Taiwan," and completely sever relations with that island.

Although he described the meeting as very friendly, Admiral Zumwalt said he "detected no flexibility" in the Chinese position on the Taiwan issue.

Just one week ago, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance urged China to join the United States in mutual efforts to normalize relations.

U.S.S.R. Dangerous, Peking Tells Africa

HONG KONG (UPI) — China warned African leaders today that the Soviet Union has "their most dangerous enemy" and was "frantically committing barbarous aggression and expansion in Africa."

The Kremlin "has been, in fact, playing tricks more sinister than those of the capital-imperialists (Americans) and frantically committing barbarous aggression and expansion in Africa," the official New China News Agency said.

The New China commentary coincided with the closing of the 49-member Organization of African Unity's annual summit in Libreville, Gabon. The summit was attended by 28 African presidents and heads of state.

The commentary praised the OAU members for adopting a resolution condemning foreign interference in African affairs, but implied that some of the nations did not properly perceive the foreign threats.

PRIVATE PLOTS PUSHED

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government is trying to breathe new life into the country's last bit of private enterprise—the tiny plots of land on which individual farmers still are permitted to raise their own cash crops.

The existence of the private plots flies in the face of Soviet ideology and contrasts with the vast mass of Soviet farmland owned by the government and farmers' co-operatives.

Private plots occupy only 1.5 per cent of all Soviet farmland but in 1975 they produced 31 per cent of its meat and milk, 35 per cent of its vegetables, 40 per cent of all eggs and 60 per cent of potatoes.

Putting practicality ahead of ideology, the government now is doing everything it can to encourage private plot production as it struggles to feed its growing population.

The campaign is being led by President Leonid Brezhnev, who declared in a major speech earlier this year that private plots were a reserve of no small importance in food supplies. He told state officials and farm organizations to help farmers with their private plots and keep the level of production up.

Nabbed Egyptian Tortured and Killed

CAIRO (CP) — The battered body of a former Egyptian cabinet minister kidnapped by Moslem extremists four days ago was found by police today and authorities said he had been shot to death after apparently being tortured.

Police said a member of the ultra-conservative sect which claimed responsibility for the kidnapping had confessed to killing Mohammed Hussein Zahabi, former minister of religious endowments.

Adli Hussien, chief prosecutor of Egyptian state security, said Zahabi's body was "blindfolded with a scarf around the face" when found in a suburban Cairo villa.

"Preliminary investigations show he was killed with a bullet which pierced his left eye," the prosecutor said.

Zahabi's body was clad in the white nightgown he was wearing when he was kidnapped from his suburban villa at 2 a.m. Sunday. A medical examiner determined that he was killed Monday night.

Zahabi, minister of religious affairs from April 1975 to November 1976, was kidnapped by members of an outlawed sect called the Atonement and Immigration Society.

The kidnappers said they would kill him unless they were paid $500,000 in ransom and 60 imprisoned members of the sect were released from jail.

The government responded by rounding up members of the sect, which seeks to make Egypt a religious state adhering strictly to the Koran. Zahabi waged a vigorous campaign against the sect while he was a member of the cabinet.

CZECH MIGRANTS GIVEN AMNESTY

PRAGUE (Reuter) — The Czechoslovak government has issued what amounts to a blanket amnesty for many citizens who have left the country illegally.

The government decision which allows such people to legalize their stay abroad was published in the official gazette last Friday. It may affect more than 200,000 persons estimated to have left the country without permission since the Communist takeover in 1948. Previously, they had been officially regarded as having broken the law.

Approved last March 16 and called the "directive on the regulation of legal ties between the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic and citizens who live abroad without the permission of the Czechoslovak authorities," the new directive allows four specific moves.

Authorities can issue a travel document to a citizen to return home, issue permission for a citizen to stay abroad permanently, release a citizen from his state citizenship or withdraw Czechoslovak citizenship.

The directive also will lead to increased links among relatives, allowing family members to visit people who have established their stay abroad.

An official statement commenting on the new directive said it was proof of the "sarious approach of the Czechoslovak authorities to the implementation of the Helsinki final act."

Jailings Worst In Yugoslavia

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The International League for Human Rights said Tuesday that Yugoslavia has proportionately more prisoners than the Soviet Union and more than any East European country except the Soviet Union and possibly Albania.

The rights group, which is in consultative status with the UN, said its report on alleged violations by Yugoslavia was timed to coincide with the Belgrade conference on the Helsinki accords, which featured human rights among its concerns.

League president Jerome Shestack sent copies to the signatories of the Helsinki agreements, including President Tito, and to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

N-Test Ban Ready—Carter

GENEVA (Reuter) — U.S. President Jimmy Carter said Tuesday the Geneva disarmament conference now is ready to prepare the way for negotiations on long-blocked treaties to ban all nuclear tests and outlaw the worst chemical weapons.

In a message to the 30-nation conference at the opening of its summer session, Carter said his administration recently completed an extensive review of the U.S. position.

U.S. and Soviet delegates said they believed private talks opening next week with Britain would lead to agreement on key elements of a comprehensive test ban. France and China, which both have atomic weapons, do not take part in the Geneva negotiations.

How to Be a Good Plant Sitter

Panic calls come from plant sitters who volunteer to care for potted plants in a neighbor's or relative's home during vacation. Usually the calls come the day before the expected return of the plant owner, so you can well imagine the panic that exists.

Not much can be done to revive badly damaged plants in 24 hours, but fortunately a few suggestions may help in avoiding the unhappy condition from developing.

When you say "yes" to taking over the care of a person's plants, go to see them before the vacation starts. Take along a notepad and a pencil.

You may know the name of every plant your friend has, but again, there may be a strange-looking one that has been slippped in. What to do for it dufing your three weeks or so of plant sitting?

First, write its name on a slip of paper and put it half under the pot. Then, on the notepad list the care it will need from you.

Follow this procedure with every plant which is not totally familiar to you. And even if they are, it is worth asking whether a particularly large specimen should be given the same amount of water as you are accustomed to give your own much smaller plant.

Of interest to you also as custodian of your friend's potted plants will be to know which if any, may be allowed to have water remaining in the dish beneath.

Standing water is not usually desirable but is tolerated by a few plants for a day or two. The same condition for other plants would cause rotted roots and stems, and various fungus diseases.

Ask about misting the plants with water to create humidity in the air and what time of day is preferable. You may be able to adjust your "house call" to accommodate the plants.

There may be an alternate system to supply moisture in the air, such as wide pans or dishes of gravel or ornamental pet rocks having water maintained below the top surface.

Make a note of this to remind yourself to check the need to add water to replenish that which evaporates into the air with the warmth of day temperatures. Nights will likely be cool enough in a closed house or apartment which has the heating system below operating level for the summer months. Ask about this too.

Some people set up rather elaborate systems of wicks from water supplies in cans to each plant on a lower level. This takes a year or two of experience in getting the right levels.

A simpler way is to stand pots on folded newspapers, a complete issue for each six-inch pot, in a tub with water just below the surface of the paper when you leave for a holiday. The papers will absorb all the water and while your plants will not be given any water from the top after your final watering the day before leaving, neither will it be possible for them to completely dry out.

The tub should be in a light place but not where it gets direct sunshine. Most mdern bathrooms do not get enough daylight for plants to be left in the bathtub for two or more weeks. Large portable tubs of any kind will be the answer, in a room that is suitable.

Just as important as the pots not drying out with this method of soaking wet papers, is that the foliage will not lose moisture because the air around will be of an even humidity from the saturated newspapers.

Choose old papers because the chemical ink fumes won't be so volatile as with fresh ink.

Other ideas may occur to plant owners and plant sitters to reduce the hazards of leaving these living treasures in another person's care.

And don't overlook the unknown hazard of a person's compatibility with plants — some people care about plants, not only care for them.

Movie Star Pitchmen Do It for the Money

By BRUCE RUSSELL

HOLLYWOOD (Reuter) — John Wayne would like you to use his favorite brand of headache tablets.

Sir Laurence Olivier extals a particular type of camera.

David Niven favors a certain brand of travellers' cheques.

If a celebrity appears on U.S. television advertising a product, the probability is that Marty Ingels persuaded him to do it.

"The U.S. is an idol-oriented country," he said. "We idolize movie stars and if one tells you to walk into the street in a white robe and with a carrot in your nose then you walk into the street in a white robe and with a carrot in your nose."

Ingels said that 20 years ago film stars thought appearing in TV commercials was beneath their dignity.

That changed when one of Hollywood's most respected veterans, Edward G. Robinson, agreed to do an advertisement for coffee.

"As wonderful and as dignified as he was, he needed the money," Ingels said.

STUMBLED INTO CAREER

Ingels, 40, a fast-talking, hyperactive former TV comedian, got into the business of rounding up stars for commercials when he was coming out of an acute nervous breakdown which followed the failure of one of his shows five years ago.

A friend asked him casually if he could get a star to push an album of sentimental old songs.

Ingels came back within hours with Rossano Brazzi. The friend was so impressed he asked him to get more.

Ingels soon made a job of it, bringing in as many as 40 willing stars for some series of television commercials.

Because he insisted on getting his offers to the stars personally, he soon made enemies of their agents.

"Most actors are surrounded by middle-men who don't even pass on the message," he said. "They turn down a $25,000 offer for their star just because there's not enough commission in it for them."

Most of his work is done on the telephone.

Telephone numbers of celebrities are usually unlisted. "But everyone's telephone number is on somebody's list somewhere and a lot of those people owe me favors."

Ingels counts his greatest victory when he signed Orson Welles to do a brandy commercial.

Welles is known as the most reclusive and uncontactable of actors. Ingels spent days trying to find his telephone number.

Finally he managed to get his manager and put the proposition to him.

But he still wasn't satisfied. He remembered Welles had recently appeared on a Dean Martin show. So he called Martin who said he would get Welles to call him.

When Welles called a few minutes later, Ingels got him to agree to the deal.

Three days after that he got a telegram from the manager, who obviously did not know the deal was already set, saying that under no circumstances would Welles make the commercial.

Ingels said most stars will agree to appear although there are still some holdouts like Charlton Heston and James Stewart.

"Clint Eastwood says he is willing to listen. Now there's a man you would think had $20 million. Why would he want to do a commercial? Raquel Welch is waiting for the big one."

Engaged to Shirley Jones, former wife of the late actor Jack Cassidy and stepmother of teenage idol David Cassidy, Ingels said he could retire now on the money he has made.

But his work drive won't let him.

He has just heard from an Oregon citizen who says he has taken photographs of the legendary monster Bigfoot, who haunts the pine forests and swamps of the northwestern U.S.

Ingels is trying to get Big Foot to appear in a television commercial.

CUPE Local Won't Split

The executive of the Canadian Union of Public Employees' local representing Greater Victoria School Board outside workers has decided to remain part of the union's joint bargaining committee.

The decision by the officials of Local 382, the only member of the six-local united front without a contract, to remain in the committee, was made at a meeting Monday night.

However, Bob Cunningham, negotiator for the local, said he resigned as spokesman for the joint committee because of his belief that it should consider pulling out of the group.

He said earlier it was possible Local 382 would withdraw because the other five locals signed two-year contracts last week with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association without waiting for the school board workers to resolve one outstanding issue.

Cunningham said although the executive of the local has chosen to remain part of the united front, the issue still has to be debated by the membership probably at the next scheduled meeting in September.

The new spokesman for the joint committee is Jim Walker, chairman of the joint body as well as president of Local 50, representing Victoria city outside workers.

He said the joint committee will give Local 382 all the financial and moral support it can.

Meanwhile, Cunningham said the local is seeking legal advice on its one remaining issue, the fact the employer's package doesn't contain a clause prohibiting the contracting out of work.

He said no further meetings are scheduled with the GVLRA and likely won't be until September unless the association's negotiator Carl Ans he'm asks for a negotiating session.

Matthews Appointed

Jack Matthews, director of the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific, has been appointed to the board of directors of the federal government's Kitimavik national youth service program.

Beginning in August, the 10-month long Kitimavik work projects will involve about 1,000 Canadians, aged 17 to 22.

The projects promote self-development, awareness of the environment, knowledge and understanding of Canada.

Matthews' appointment will not affect his position at the college which he has held since the college opened in 1974.

LAB Raising Prices On Imported Wines

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government has increased the price of 40 imported wines effective July 1, in a reversal of an earlier announcement that prices would come down to encourage moderation.

All heavy-selling low priced imported wines have had their prices increased.

They are the main competitors for B.C. wines, which have had their prices frozen.

On March 31, provincial Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair announced the government would reduce the prices of imported and domestic wines to encourage British Columbians to switch from hard liquor.

This would encourage moderation in drinking, he said.

In April, in line with this policy, the price of a French wine, Chateaneuf Du Pape, was reduced from $5.35 to $5.10. Effective this week, the price has been increased $1.65 to $6.75.

Several other mid-price and expensive wines, were also increased, especially those from France and Germany.

Biggest blow, however, was a decision to increase the top-selling low priced imported wines.

Yago was increased to $2.20 from $2, Gamza was increased to $2.20 to $2.10, Pinot went up to $2.50 from $2.35 and Mouton Cadet went to $3.95 from $3.75.

In the mid-price range, Marquisat, a big-seller, went from $5.45 to $5.55.

Nick Clark, spokesman for the pricing department of the liquor administration branch, said the increases were ordered due to higher costs.

Some French and German wine producers have increased their prices but an even bigger factor is the slump in the Canadian dollar compared to the European currencies, Clark said.

On the basis of cost increases, further price increases can be expected in imported wines.

On the domestic front, prices were stable or down slightly. Wine prices were unchanged but Canadian rye prices were reduced in British Columbia, despite the government policy of discouraging consumers away from hard liquor.

A total of 21 Canadian rye brands showed decreases of a nickel or dime.

Clark said the government is passing along price changes announced by producers. Some brands had increased prices this spring but the majority did not. Now, for competitive reasons, distilleries are rescinding their earlier price increases and the price cut is being passed along to consumers.

He said wine drinkers could expect to pay significantly higher prices for imported wines later this year because of European market conditions. A frost killed many acres of grapes in France this spring and the wine crop will be lower than usual.

Germany had a good grape crop but appears to be producing a smaller volume of table wines this year.

These two factors, along with currency fluctuations, would mean further price increases, if the government decided to pass them along to consumers.

In March, Mair said he expected the government would have between $5 million and $6 million less per year in revenues because of the price cuts announced at that time.

He was not available this morning to comment on what the revised revenue totals would be in light of the price increased effective this week.

MARKET BLAST

PETAH TIVQA (Reuter) — Twenty-three people were injured when a bomb exploded beneath a vegetable stall in a crowded market today.

Security authoritites said the blast was caused by a "fairly large" bomb being planted in a vegetable crate.

It was the worst bombing since May, 1976, when an explosion in Jerusalem killed one person and wounded 29.

Tel Strike Vote As Talks Break

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Telecommunications Workers Union said Tuesday it will hold a strike vote among its 10,000 members at the B.C. Telephone Co.

Union spokesman Bob Donelly made the announcement after contract negotiations broke down earlier in the day. He said the union is seeking the strike mandate because B.C. Tel has been trying to make substantial changes in the recommendations of conciliation commissioner Dr. Noel Hall, which the union accepted.

Those recommendations called for a one-year contract.

"This short-sighted attitude of the company will probably result in a total disruption of communications in this province," he told a news conference.

Donelly said he is "absolutely certain" TWU members will vote overwhelmingly to strike.

Hall's report recommended a 45-cent hourly increase in a one-year agreement retroactive to Jan. 1 on wage rates ranging from $6.42 to $9.15 an hour. Hall said the wage recommendations fall within federal Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

However, the conciliator recommended no change, at this time, in a contentious contracting-out clause that the union says allows B.C. Tel to buy equipment from companies that could be produced by its own subsidiaries employing TWU members. The practice triggered a series of rotating strikes earlier this year.

B. C. Tel has proposed a two-year contract on all matters except wages. Company spokesman Keith Matthews said it was "unfortunate the union could not see the logic and common sense" of the company proposal.

Philliponi Gift Probe Under Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deputy police chief Tom Dixon said Tuesday that a combined investigation by the attorney-general's department and the RCMP into bribery charges stemming from a Christmas list belonging to Penthouse Cabaret owner Joe Philliponi should be complete in two to three weeks.

Dixon said the investigation was a result of evidence produced at Philliponi's bribery trial in May.

Philliponi was convicted of giving a bribe to a member of the B.C. Liquor Board and was later sentenced to 30 months in jail.

Dixon said a number of people were under investigation, but declined to mention names or positions of the people involved.

On Tuesday, attorney-general Garde Gardom denied any knowledge of the investigation by his department.

CBC radio claimed a number of prominent British Columbians, including a judge, four Vancouver city aldermen and two Vancouver newsmen received gifts.

The CBC said it had a list of people given gifts by operators of the Penthouse Cabaret.

The persons who allegedly received the gifts were not identified by the CBC.

INSULATION SPY TO FILM HOMES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal government jets have been ordered to fly over Vancouver-area homes in an aerial photo-spying mission in the name of energy conservation.

The project has been launched by British Columbia Hydro in conjunction with the federal energy department as a means to cut heating bills for homeowners.

Three energy department jets are equipped with special sensory equipment to take aerial infrared photographs to help homeowners pinpoint where heat is escaping from roofs and windows.

The photographs (thermograms) will be taken at night to record heat images, and will depict well-insulated roof in black, while skimpy insulation will appear grey or, at worst, white.

Hydro spokesman Syd Orpwood said Tuesday a reduction in the heat loss could be achieved through follow-up insulation by the homeowner. An identical program in Lindsay, Ont., was followed up with residents viewing the photographs in a community sports arena. They were helped in "reading" the photographs by technical assistants.

Orpwood said if the Vancouver project is successful, Hydro will likely launch aerial scans in Kamloops and Victoria.

The Vancouver program is planned for January or February, 1978.

English Told To Open Minds

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau began the long-awaited debate on national unity Tuesday with a professorial plea that language rights are the key to an undivided Canada, but the opposition retorted that bilingualism will not save the country.

Trudeau, announcing a special unity task force to be headed by former Anti-Inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin and former Ontario premier John Robarts, called on English Canadians "to open their hearts, to open their minds" to French Canada.

"If the francophones are to remain part of this country . . . then this will require certain accommodations by the English-speaking majority," he said. "Accommodations like sharing more power with French-Canadians in business, professions and private organizations; like greater willingness . . . to provide for French-speaking minorities."

Otherwise, he warned, his voice at all times quiet and conciliatory, Canada would become "two language ghettos existing side-by-side."

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark and his New Democrat counterpart, Ed Broadbent, both accused Trudeau of having tunnel vision.

Clark, referring to the prime minister's remarks that he had been spreading the unity gospel across the country since the Parti Quebecois took over that province eight months ago, said Trudeau should have delivered his opening sermon in Parliament.

"This should've been the first place he came to discuss national unity," the Tory leader said, reiterating his contention that Trudeau is trying to emasculate Parliament by ignoring it.

He said both Trudeau and his government had been preoccupied "too exclusively"

CHAMPAGNE ROUND-UP IN LAGOS

LAGOS (AFP) — Police seized more than 4,000 bottles of champagne today in what the national radio described as a bid to check ostentious living in the city.

In February the Nigerian military government proclaimed a decree banning champagne and other sparkling wines, stipulating a fine of $1,600 of six months jail for defaulters.

The government said it banned champagne because, besides constituting a drain on the nation's foreign exchange, it had become a status symbol among the wealthy.

SALMON FISHERMEN NETTING A BONANZA

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was a million-dollar opening day for commercial fishermen netting the heavy Stuart Lake sockeye salmon run, expected to be the largest since records were kept.

Fishermen aboard boats scattered along the nearby Fraser River and in Georgia Strait worked until they were exhausted Monday, some up to their knees in silvery salmon.

About 200,000 fish were landed on 70 gillnet boats. The fish are worth about $5 each to the fishermen and more than double that to the retailer.

Some fishermen caught up to 800 fish Monday, worth about $4,000.

"My wrists are so sore from taking fish off the net that I can hardly move my hands today," said one fisherman interviewed Tuesday. "My God, I took in 370 fish on my first set of the season."

John Roos of the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission said one reason for the large run, which peaks every four years, is that there was an industry shutdown in 1969 and many fish escaped up the Fraser to spawn.

He said fishways through the Fraser Canyon have also been improved so that more spawners survive the battle upstream and more young salmon swim to the sea.

Ross said a run of about 1.5 million sockeye had been predicted, but that number may be too conservative.

Fishing was slack on Tuesday during a tour of the fishing area with federal fisheries officers. But there were no grumbles from fishermen with the possibility of another bonanza catch next Monday allowed again.

Railwest Subsidy Promised

The provincial government has stepped in with an 11-hour promise of a subsidy to keep the Railwest boxcar manufacturing plant in Squamish open for at least a while.

But the plant will have to close Aug. 14 for two months anyway to allow time for materials to be ordered, and reopening is contingent on an order for boxcars still being pursued.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, who went to Ottawa last week to try to get a federal boxcar contract to keep the plant open, told the legislature Tuesday the government is willing to subsidize the cars produced at Railwest so their prices will be competitive with the other plants.

Phillips said there is an order coming shortly from Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian National Railway for between 200 to 600 ballast cars.

The provincial government, he said, will guarantee that Railwest's bid on that order is as low as the lowest bid from any other company.

Phillips estimated that if the government-owned boxcar plant receives an order for 200 cars, it could remain open, with about 160 employees, until mid-February.

There are about 250 employees at the plant.

NDP economic development critic Gary Lauk estimated that Railwest could produce the cars for between $19,000 and $22,000 a car, while other Canadian plants would likely do it for $18,500 so the subsidy could be up to about $3,500 a car.

Lauk said he was disturbed Phillips has waited so long to act and likened the minister's trip as "arriving in Quixotic fashion on a swayback horse, plopping into Ottawa."

"Once again you've been led down the garden path (by the federal government)," Lauk said.

He said the government had laughed for months at the opposition's suggestion of a subsidy, but when it was finally obvious the plant would close without it, Phillips had to "get off his fat stats" and go back to Ottawa with the offer.

Airline Denies Racism

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Air Canada has categorically denied that racial discrimination was involved when a group of Metis and non-status Indians were ejected from an overbooked Air Canada flight at Ottawa International Airport on Sunday, June 26.

In a statement issued in Montreal Tuesday, Pierre Jeanniot, eastern region vice-president, clamed the bumping of the native people resulted from a "procedural error" on the part of a clerk in the airline's Montreal reservations office.

The clerk cancelled the group's confirmed reservations because the employee thought it was a duplicate booking, Jeanniot said.

The reservations employee was said to be confused because two groups of native people had reservations on the flight.

One group was headed for Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, the other was going to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories.

It was the Yukon group that had its reservations cancelled in error, the Jeanniot statement claimed.

The explanation has done nothing to satisfy the Native Council of Canada that racism was not involved in the way Air Canada ground personnel treated the native people.

The Council represents Canada's 750,000 Metis and non-status Indians and an official said Tuesday the organization would vigorously pursue its court action to recover dam-

'Actual Killing' Film Circulating West Van

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police here have confiscated "kiddie-porn" films, there's a "snuff" film — a woman actually killed on screen during a sex performance — circulating somewhere on the upper levels of West Vancouver, and there's talk of anti-porn vigilante squads in the central interior.

"Pornography is becoming a serious problem in Vancouver," says Insp. Ken Brown, Vancouver vice squad. "With profits anywhere from 300 to 600 per cent to be made, it's right up there with drugs, prostitution, and gambling. The fear of the vice squad is that the situation is ripe for takeover by organized crime."

Corp. Darrell Wakelam of the RCMP morality squad, says local porn producers already are reliant on American mob connections to process and distribute their films.

"The cost to produce porn films using children here is pretty high," he said. "The thing is, to get the film processed and duplicated . . . well, there's no such place up here. We don't have the facilities so they go down to L.A." where the prints are made and shipped through a network of distributors.

Once considered the product of South America and Mexico, kiddy porn-films displaying the sex acts of children, often as young as four and five years old — now, are produced in the U.S. and Canada.

"We got one with a South American brother and sister which were among the first to make it up to Canada," Wakelam said. "There's a few copies around. They're trickling in over the border. We hear there are some done locally but we haven't nabbed them yet."

Sources indicate the appearance locally of a South American "snuff" film, apparently making limited rounds of several fashionable residences in West Vancouver. Although a number of films have appeared in which death is simulated, the West Vancouver film allegedly shows a South American or Mexican woman being shot and stabbed on screen.

"That's the ultimate film," Wakelam said. "That's as far as you can go."

"When people get tired of ordinary, straight sex, that's when you see the kinky stuff. Bestiality, sadism, bondage, kids, and death, as far as you go.

"We can't do anything about it because we're up against legislation and public apathy," Wakelam said. "The definition of obscene matter is anything that is totally concerned with sex, depending on territorial morals."

But Brown says any raid on a porn store is treated lightly by police and media alike.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. arms control and disarmament agency has warned the White House that production of the new neutron eight-inch artillery projectiles and Lance missile warheads might damage one or more major United States arms negotiations initiatives with the Soviet Union and other nations.

"No one here thinks it is a good idea to build these weapons now," said one ACDA official Tuesday. "But there is a division of opinion within the agency as to how much effect production will have on these negotiations."

According to informed executive branch and congressional sources, the still-secret ACDA analysis of producing a new generation of enhanced radiation tactical nuclear weapons pointed out possible adverse impact on:

—Talks with the Soviet Union on a comprehensive test ban treaty since according to an ACDA source, additional underground nuclear tests are needed before either the Lance neutron warhead or the neutron eight-inch shell are ready for production.

—Pursuing non-proliferation talks with nations that currently do not have nuclear weapons because the United States would be moving toward a second generation of weapons while telling others they should not have a first.

—Discussions with NATO allies and the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact nations to cut down on both sides, European forces where, three years ago, American spokesmen pledged not to move to "mini-nukes" that would reduce the threshold between nuclear and conventional weapons.

The neutron weapons are not considered "mini-nukes" because their yields are still large enough to distinguish them from conventional weapons.

Nonetheless, the accuracy and limiting of collateral blast and heat damage of the enhanced radiation weapons make them appear more usable than the current tactical nuclear weapons now deployed in Europe, according to Pentagon planners.

Opponents of the neutron weapons argue this very quality, which makes them credible as deterrents also means, by logic, that they lower the nuclear threshold that now exists.

Meanwhile, France, West Germany and three other European nations have signed an agreement in Paris to develop and export fast-breeder nuclear reactors in open defiance of U.S. President Jimmy Carter's effort to ban such atomic devices.

The five-nation accord Tuesday was hailed by French government officials as a reaffirmation of West Europe's energy independence from Washington.

The fast-breeder reactors are fueled by plutonium, the material used in nuclear warheads.

School Vandalism Researched

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. School Trustees Association has commissioned a $20,000 study on vandalism in schools, Ken Werker, BCSTA co-ordinator of research services, said Tuesday.

Werker said the study will look for human solutions rather than technical solutions, such as guards and burglar alarms, in an attempt to cut down the $7 million in vandalism against schools in 1975-76.

"We hope to develop an education program for students, teachers and communities across B.C. to help cut down on vandalism, and the content of the program will be determined by the study," he said.

BITING BATS MAY BE RABID

Bats that go bite in the night can be dangerous at this time of year, warns the provincial ministry of health.

Dr. Anthony Larsen, director of epidemology for the ministry's public health programs, said today it is bat time in B.C. and warned that bats with rabies are dangerous.

Already this year one man has been bitten by a bat that turned out to have ravies.

Anyone bitten by a bat should trap the bat, killing it if necessary and then report to a doctor or a public health unit taking the bat along.

"I would advise anyone to avoid handling a bat that appears to be sick or that seems to be unusually tame. It could have rabies," Larsen said.

At this time of year it's especially important not to let bat bites go untreated, Larsen said. "People should be especially wary of any bat that is acting strangely."

The treatment for rabid bat bites is a daily series of uncomfortable injections for two weeks, Larsen said.

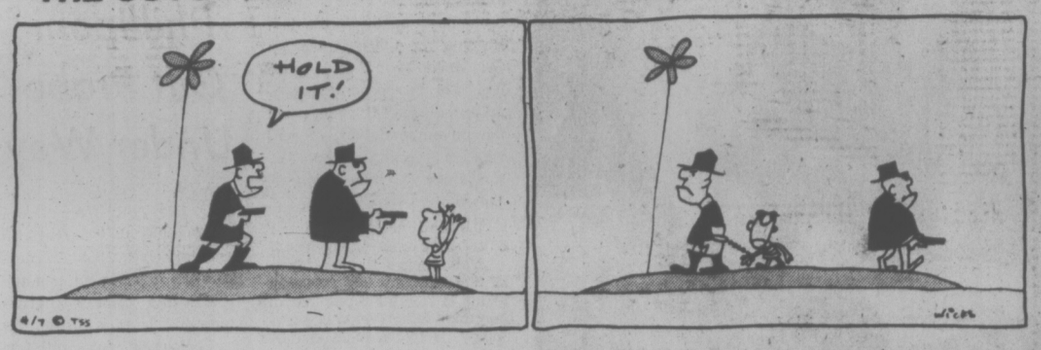
THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks



PEACE FORCE REJECTED

SALISBURY (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith today rejected the prospect of a Commonwealth peacekeeping force to keep order in Rhodesia during a transition to black majority rule.

Smith was asked at a news conference if he would allow a force consisting of troops from British Commonwealth countries such as Nigeria, Ghana, India and Canada, to come to Rhodesia during the transition period.

"The sort of thing we've been reading about in the newspapers is a nonstarter," he said.

Britain has said it and the Unite States were exploring the possibility of such a peacekeeping force.

"On the other hand," Smith said, "if there is a constructive suggestion on the part of responsible members of the free world— those who are helping us to try to come to a settlement — to make a contribution, it would be ridiculous for Rhodesia to turn this down."

Traffic Mishap Injuries Seaman

A 21-year-old seaman off HMCS Restigouche is in critical condition in Victoria General Hospital today following an early morning traffic mishap in Esquimalt.

An Esquimalt police spokesman said Joseph Gilles Daniel Hamelin, of Montreal, received massive head injuries after he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed into a rock bluff in the 1400 block Lyall.

A passerby reported the accident to police at 12:25 a.m.

with the Official Languages Act, to the point where such pressing issues as the economy, regional disparity and western alienation virtually had been ignored.

"This sign of some action by the prime minister is too late."

Clark, whose barbs must have been hitting home in Liberal ranks if the amount of heckling that resulted is any indicator, also commented on the special Pepin-Robarts task force, wishing it well.

But he introduced a motion calling for establishment of a joint Senate-Commons committee to handle the inquiry instead of the task force, which he dismissed as yet another piece of evidence of the Liberals' contempt for Parliament.

The Conservative leader made it clear that he is not against institutionalized bilingualism, but he quarrelled sharply with Trudeau's contention that language policy will unify Canadians.

"In that respect, the prime minister could not be more wrong!"

He recalled Canada's centennial celebrations of 1967, remarking on the spontaneous enthusiasm prevalent then, an atmosphere he said contrasts sharply with "the forced gaiety" that marked the approach to the country's 110th birthday.

Braodbent, if anything, was even more scathing than Clark in his criticism of the government, especially about the Pepin-Robarts group, which is to include five other regional representatives.

Four names were announced Tuesday: Richard Cashin, a former Newfoundland MP; John Robert Evans of Ancaster, Ont.; Muriel Kovitz of Calgary and Ross Murks, the mayor of 100 Mile House, B.C. The name of the fifth regional representative, from Quebec, is to be announced after the government finds one.

The NDP leader, an economist, criticized the work done by other "task forces," such as the royal commission on taxation and the one on foreign ownership.

He said the tax system has become even more unfair and inequitable since the group's report was submitted to the government and that despite foreign ownership recommendations, "Canadian industry is being gobbled up at an ever-increasing rate."

Broadbent said that based on this record, "we can expect greater disunity in the future rather than a united Canada."

ages arising out of the incident.

The Council has claimed since the incident first caught media attention that 15 native people were ejected from the over-booked aircraft and that at least two were told to get off because they looked like Indians.

The two were from the Northwest Territories and held individual confirmed reservations. They were not members of the Yukon group, whose reservation status was questioned by Air Canada, a native council official repeated Tuesday.

The Air Canada statement mentions 13 as the number of native poeple bumped from the Winnipeg-bound flight.

The statement claims that "those deplaned were given refunds of half their fare, plus free ground transporation, lodging and meals while waiting to be put aboard the next available flight . . ."

Bipp Webber, president of the Yukon Association of Non-Status Indians, said from Whitehorse Tuesday that the Yukon delegates, however, refused the $60 refunds because it was felt they amounted to "tokenism."

Webber said: "We are not pleased with the treatment Air Canada gave us. They (AC staff) made our delegates feel like they were getting a handout rather than trying to correct the mishap."

General Plans Vote

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Pakistan's new military ruler, Gen. Muhammed Ziaul Haq, says he has no personal political ambitions and plans to hold an election in October.

There was no indication when the army chief-of-staff plans to release former prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who has dominated Pakistani politics for years, and the rest of the country's leading politicians arrested during the bloodless military coup Tuesday.

"I want to make it clear that I have not assumed responsibility because of any political ambitions," Ziaul said in a broadcast Tuesday night. "The step has not been taken at the prompting of any interested person."

Schooner to Rescue

Saltbanker Gets New Assignment In Gov't Program to Get Kids Sprung from Institutional Care

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A 37-year-old saltbanker is about to become a ship of hope for socially maladjusted youngsters in care of the human resources ministry.

The 98-ton Robertson II, built for fishing the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia with her catch salted down in the hold, is part of the provincial government's $40 million program to take children out of traditional institutional care.

The 107-foot schooner was last used for fishing in 1974 when she was bought by Victoria psychiatrist Philip Ney and sailed from Nova Scotia 8,000 miles via Panama to become the marine component of the Victoria-based Quest Star Society.

This non-profit organization aims at giving family and group experience in sailing, seamanship and outdoor living, offers a floating classroom environment for school children as young as 10 and gives adolescent and pre-adolescent youngsters the motivation to improve themselves by performing tasks directly affecting their well-being.

The human resources program will be the fifth activity of Quest Star. It already is involved in West Trek, Sail West, Sailor Maker and Sea Search, which include both camping and cruising from the west coast through Gulf Islands, mainland coast and Puget Sound.

They range from weekends to 12-days and a cost of about $18 a day per student.

Human resources facilities so far have been inadequate to give proper institutional care to disadvantaged, pre-delinquent and dropout children who could benefit by the Quest Star concept, the society said in a brief to the ministry.

Twenty-day cruises for such youngsters would avoid an institutional environment and demonstrate that many are capable of becoming normal, healthy, productive adults if they can only break out of their frustration and negativism.

Bob Wing, director of the shore program and sometime member of the Robertson's crew, said boys and girls are sometime turned off abruptly by their saltwater experience.

He recalls two young people who stepped aboard with the feeling they were being ripped off.

For two weeks after their cruise, nothing was heard from the pair. Then they started visiting the ship when it was in port and have been trying to get back aboard ever since — "as cabin boys or anything," Wing said.

The 20-day adventure sailing course approved by the human resources ministry would be aimed at motivating adolescents toward self-improvement.

Besides regular shipboard duties, they would involve a taste of commercial fishing.

Ney's programs began about five years ago in a small boat limited to 12 persons and was soon outgrown.

The Robertson II, located at Shelburne, N.S., had accommodation for 20 and by converting part of her hold to bunks, now sleeps 30 adults and children.

Groups are divided into watches with a member of the eight-man crew in charge of each watch which rotates every four hours. They learn skills like knots and splices, conning, navigation, ship husbandry, sail handling and terminology.

In addition they get a chance to handle small boats, swim, skin-dive, fish, sail small craft, have shore parties, sing-songs and ride the bosun's chair aloft into the rigging.

School classes save their pennies and come from as far as the Prairies to take the three to five-day Sea Search cruises.

Each child taking part is urged to raise at least 50 per cent of his own fee, with parents and sometimes the school making up the balance.

Classroom work is included in the cruise, augmented by the experience of catching live biology specimens minutes before the lecture or demonstration.

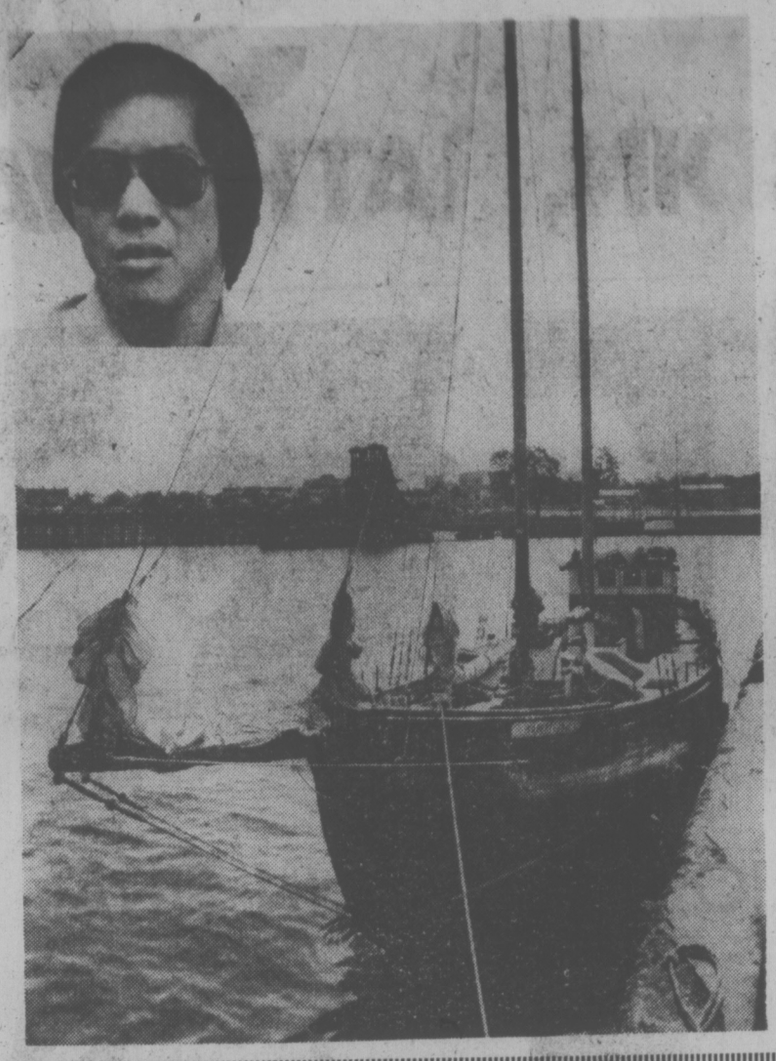
Wing and colleague Ron Lancaster say the popularity spreads by word of mouth, and "we measure success by the people who want to come back," as Wing put it.

"We get all kinds of letters saying what has happened to them," Lancaster added, showing a letter from a Grade seven student who was enthused about the ship and the way it was handled, the food, bunks and being hoisted in the bosun's chair.

A Prince George teacher wrote, "no other field trip is so rewarding . . . the students felt sad on their return. It involved students and teachers in shipboard activities . . . offered new and different situations and meaningful experience."

"On that cruise it rained every single day," Wing commented. "That was the best cruise we've had. It didn't dampen their spirits at all."

He said both the shipboard and camping experience gives youngsters a feeling of self-worth they may never have before felt, simply by hauling on the ship's 2,000 feet of sail or pitching a tent to keep dry on the trail.



They Want To Return

The Victoria-based Quest Star Society says it measures the success of its varied programs aboard Robertson II by the people who want to come back.

"No other field trip is so rewarding," wrote a Prince George teacher, reflecting the feelings of his students.

Three Quick Fires Blamed on Vandals

Vandals are believed responsible for three separate fires that broke out in rapid succession in the Oaklands area late Tuesday causing $4,500 damage and sending one man to hospital.

A spokesman for the Victoria fire department said the fires were reported over a half-hour period beginning at 11:24 p.m. when a passer-by spotted smoke coming from a car parked in front of a house at 1521 Pearl.

A minute later firemen received a report of a fire against a wall of the Oaklands elementary school annex building and at 11:54 p.m. they were called to a fire in the rear porch of a house at 2659 Victor.

Fire offocials estimated about $4,000 damage to the house, $500 to the car and none to the school.

Howard Smith, occupant of the house, cut his finger while fighting the blaze and was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was treated and released.

In an unrelattd fire tenants of the Ritz Hotel, 710 Fort, were forced to evacuate after a smoke detector activated an alarm at 3:45 a.m.

The smoke came from a third floor bathroom where firemen found a towel had been set on fire.

Damage was estimated at about $25.

Police Get Authority To Kill Vicious Dogs

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has acceded to several requests and given municipal police forces the authority to destroy marauding dogs.

A cabinet order-in-council has proclaimed two sections of the Domestic Animal Protection Act returning the authority to deal with vicious dogs to municipalities.

One of the sections allows a provincial court judge to order a dog killed if the judge is satisfied the animal has killed or is likely to kill or injure a person or domestic animal.

Al Pelter, head of the provincial livestock branch, said in an interview municipalities used to have such authority under the Animal Act but the pertinent sections were repealed when the Domestic Animal Protection Act became law in 1973.

He said Vancouver was the first to notice the loss of authority and made provision to have it restored. Since that time other municipalities including Saanich and Mission, have requested the authority be given back.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said Tuesday the changes are welcome although they are not necessary as they were in 1975 when there was more of a problem controlling dogs.

He said he has not yet seen the sections of the act which have been proclaimed.

However, he added, police need some power to be able to deal effectively with vicious or marauding dogs. Prior to the proclamations, such dogs could only be impounded and police had no power to pick-up dogs or destroy them.

Section six of the Act, now states that "where a person finds a dog running at large and attacking or viciously pursuing a person or domestic animal, he may kill the dog."

The other section gives provincial judges the power to order a dog killed. Authority is also given peace officers, who are convinced the situation is urgent and have obtained the consent of the local police commissioner.

UVIC MAN NAMED JAIL DIRECTOR

Bill Pogson, a University of Victoria lecturer, has been appointed director of the Lakeview Camp, the new juvenile containment centre being developed near Campbell River.

Pogson, a lecturer in the Child Care Facility, has been involved in corrections since 1967, working in institutions at Haney, Alouette Lake and the Metchosin farm camp.

Lakeview Camp is one of four centres being developed in the province for juvenile offenders in jail-like settings. The camp opens Jan. 1, and will have a capacity of 20 juveniles.

Dr. Dewey Appointed Dean

The University of Victoria board of governors has appointed Dr. John Dewey, 47, to a five-year term as Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies.

Dewey, a professor in the Physics Department, was formerly Dean of Academic Affairs, an office abolished June 30.

He succeeds Dr. S. A. Jennings, 62, whose term as Dean of Graduate Studies has expired.

Dewey has been at UVic since 1965 and is an internationally-known expert on explosions and their effects.

The board of governors also named Dr. Izzud-Din Pal as acting Dean of Arts and Science, UVic's largest faculty.

Pal is an associate professor in the Department of Economics. He replaces Dr. Alfred Fischer who is taking a year's study leave.

Professor Murray Fraser, Dean of UVic's two-year-old Faculty of Law, has been named chairman of the Committee of Canadian Law Deans for 1977-78.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch, who is chairman of the Council of Western Canadian University Presidents, has just been elected to the board of the Association of Universitits and Colleges of Canada, which is the mother organization of all professional university groups.

For the past two years, Dr. Peter Smith, Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts, has been chairman of the Canadian Association of Fine Arts Deans.

Dr. Norma Mickelson, Dean of the Faculty of Education, has just stepped down from a one-year term as chairman of the Canadian Association of Deans of Education.

Dr. G. Neil Perry, who retired June 30 as director of UVic's School of Public Administration, has been this past year president of the Insititute of Public Administration of Canada.

Early Sign-Up At University

The pre-registration program that saved students long line-ups at the University of Victoria last September is in effect again this year.

Starting today, students can register for their winter courses in room 207 of the Clearihue building from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The program continues to Aug. 12.

When the early registration was initiated last year, some skeptics on campus said that few students would bother with it.

However, 3,600 students — more than 50 per cent — took advantage of summer registration.

Administrative Registrar Gordon Smiley said they were mainly the senior students who had experienced the long September line-ups in the past.

Pre-registration could involve some 75 per cent of the students in the future, he said.

Meanwhile, Smiley won't speculate on the total enrolment at UVic in the fall.

There are 700 first-year students who have been conditionally accepted by UVic.

There are also 6,000 last year students who are eligible to re-register this year, he said.

International Body to Sponsor Tall Ships' Race

Times Staff

The British-based International Sail Training Association has agreed to sponsor a race of the world's tall ships from Honolulu to Victoria in 1978, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Tuesday.

The ships are expected to reach the Inner Harbor around July 15.

The tall ships' race is one of several marine events being arranged to mark the bicentennial of Capt. James Cook's landing at Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound.

International naval reviews in Victoria and Vancouver and an extensive marine archeology expedition are also planned.

Bawlf said it will probably be September or October before it is known which ships will come here.

He said European vessels will be attending a convention in the Baltic at that time so he is anticipating entries from South America, Japan, the United States, Australia, New Zealand and Asia.

"We're reasonably confident we'll get the Eagle (a United States coast Guard ship) which I think is 340 feet long," Bawlf said.

He said negotiations with the international association have been arranged through Barclay Warburton, of the American Sail Training Association, based at Rhode Island.

In preparation for the tall ships event, Bawlf has been negotiating with the federal government and reports Justic Minister Ron Basford, is "very interested".

Bawlf has asked for federal assistance in dredging the Inner Harbor in the area where the old Canadian Pacific wharf was situated, in extending the black ball jetty out into the harbor and creating a small boat basin.

Bawlf hopes to have six to eight of the larger square-riggers and a variety of smaller schooner-type ships come to Victoria.

"The objective is to have as many as possible in the Inner Harbor. We want a visual record of the event . . . a record of tall ships against the background of The Empress and the legislative Buildings," he said, addding any overflow will be docked at Ogden Point.

Bawlf said an international naval review is planned for the time the tall ships will be here and in Vancouver and he is relying on Canadian naval assistance to contact other countries with tall ships. He hopes the navy will organize the marshalling of the tall ships and assist with spectator vessels.

He said the tall ships are expected to be here and in Vancouver for two weeks before racing from Victoria down the coast to San Francisco.

"There will be a sailpast in both Victoria and Vancouver as well as onshore events," Bawlf said.

The events would include whaler racing, conventional sports and Bawlf is hoping Greater Victoria's ethnic groups will act as hosts to visiting crews.

The minister said he has approached Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand, for help in launching a marine archeology expedition on Vancouver Island.

"We want to organize a fairly extensive expedition. This was the outpost of the empire. People travelled 16,000 miles to Victoria," Bawlf said.

In addition to exploring Friendly Cove, Bawlf said he hopes the expedition would seek for relics of the Tonquin, sent out by Jacob Astor to establish a settlement in Astoria, Ore. The ship was lost off the west coast of Vancouver Island in 1811 after her crew was massacred by Indians.

Another ship, the Boston, suffered a similar fate in 1801.

Bawlf also hopes explorations will be carried out at Long Beach in search of a Spanish galleon that was lost there around 1790.

The minister said Tofino residents report part of the galleon was found buried in the sand in the 1920s.

He admits there is much to be done before any of these plans come to fruition but adds:

"Nothing ventured, nothing gained . . . and I'm always a positive thinker."
